Budget, rezoning on warrant for Sept. 28 special town meeting

by Arlene Surprenant

Budget and rezoning articles will predominate at Wilmington's special town meeting September 28. Of the eight articles on the warrant, three deal with raising money and four have to do with rezoning.

Article one asks voters to raise funds for a consultant to closely review and provide assistance with all Chapter 774 proposals and to assist the town in developing its own affordable housing.

Article two seeks money for unpaid NESWC and medical bills from the previous year. The NESWC bill totals $67,000 while the medical costs come to approximately $18,000.

Article three seeks the amendment of an article at a 1985 town meeting dealing with the Jacobs Street sewer betterment. Voters are asked to increase the allotment from 1985 from $17,000 to a more "realistic" $60,000 to allow Jacobs Street residents to tie into the sewer system.

Article five, submitted by Danco Development Company, seeks to rezone 46 acres on Andover Street from R60 to R20 for residential homes. This is the same parcel that narrowly missed being the site of a PRD development at April's annual town meeting.

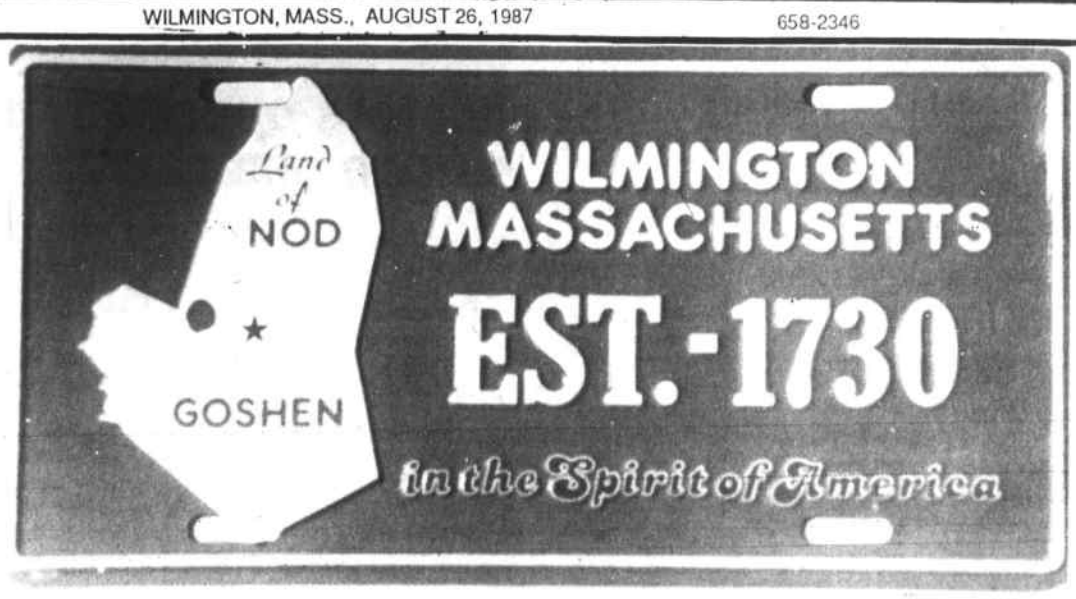
Article six, petitioned by Lester Chisholm, seeks to rezone 24 acres comprising his mink farm on Hopkins Street from R60 to R10 for single family homes. Chisholm plans to make a presentation on the proposal at this Thursday's Affordable Housing Task Force meeting at 8 p.m.

Article seven is submitted by Steve MacInnes though developer Jay Tighe reportedly helped put the proposal together. It asks voters to rezone 28.5 acres of the App property on the West side of Main Street from R20 and R60 to General Business.

Dick Goglia of the Flower Stop asks voters to rezone 1.1 acres on Middlesex Avenue from R20 to General Business to square off his property.

Article four is submitted by the Wilmington Planning Board. It seeks to amend the zoning bylaws so that off street signs can be allowed for local industry and businesses as well as area churches.

A joint hearing of the Wilmington Finance Committee and the Wilmington Planning Board will be held in Town Hall Tuesday, September 15 to review all eight articles.



Home-town plate It looks a lot like the town's 250th anniversary license plate, produced in 1980. But the new Wilmington plate is not pegged to any particular year. Designed by Adele Passmore, the plate is available through Bob Cain's office.

Wilmington has a new license plate

New Wilmington license plates touting the fact that the town was established in 1730 are now available to Wilmington residents.

The plates are similar in design to earlier ones with a blue background and a map of Goshen and Nod. They also proclaim in red letters that Wilmington is "in the spirit of America." The plates were designed by artist Adele Passmore of Andover Street.

Selectmen Chairman Robert Cain, who had the plates printed, is now seeking a local organization to distribute the plates. In the meantime, residents may obtain them from Cain's office on Main Street at a cost of four dollars.

School opens September 9

by Arlene Surprenant

With school set to open September 9, parents are asked to cooperate with school officials as new bus routes and redistricting plans are put into effect this year.

After personally driving each route, Assistant Supt. Henry Dembowski said he discovered some unsafe, narrow streets and several streets without names which he brought to the attention of the highway department. He said there are other problems as well which could pose serious safety hazards for school children, such as large bushes which inhibit visibility at corners. Dembowski asks that parents do all they can to minimize these problems and help their children adjust to the changes this year. He also pointed out that since many bus drivers are new and may get lost, at first, parents should remain calm and "help facilitate the first few days until the routes are laid down."

Dembowski reminds the general public to stop for all buses, including the blue mini vans, when lights are flashing and to use extreme caution on state highways where youngsters are not allowed to cross the street.

According to Dembowski, the goal to provide bus service to all Wilmington youngsters has, for the most part, been met. There will be three bus runs in the morning. Fifteen buses will take high school students to their classes, which begin at 7:40 a.m. and end at 2:26 p.m.

Twelve buses will transport intermediate students to the West and North schools where classes begin at 8 a.m. and end at 2:30 p.m. Fifteen buses will make a third run to the three elementary schools so students can begin classes at 8:55 a.m. and end at 2:55 p.m.

Dembowski praised Trombley Bus Co. for its "superb" cooperation as the changes were made over the summer. He explained a lot of time went into the routes and should parents have any concerns, they should contact him either before opening day or once classes get underway.

This year will mark the first time sixth graders will be housed at the intermediate schools. This step was taken to ease crowded conditions at the elementary level. Sixth, seventh, and eighth graders will adhere to a tighter schedule with no study halls. Sixth graders will be located on the second floor. Gleaming new computer labs with a new curriculum is available at both the intermediate and elementary schools.

In summation, Dembowski said faculty members and administrators are well prepared for the start of another school year.

"There has been a lot of careful planning that has gone into the reorganization and bus changes. The high school looks nice and clean and it's obvious the maintenance people have gone out of their way. Planning wise, we're as sharp as we can be for opening day," Dembowski said.

Boy burned in black powder explosion

A seven-year-old boy is in good condition at Mass. General Hospital with burns from a black powder explosion.

Steven Corum of 158 Salem St., Wilmington was taken to the Regional Health Center in Wilmington by his mother. He was treated for burns on about 30 percent of his body, on his hands, chest and face, and was then transferred to the Mass. General.

Officer Jim Cuoco was dispatched to the Regional Health Center at 2:35 p.m. When he arrived, the boy was in no condition to talk.

A friend of the boy, however, was able to take police to a spot in the woods near the boy's home. The scene revealed a black powder container, a striker and a knife. A paper towel on the ground was singed, with a burn mark about eight inches in diameter. Up to a pound of black powder could have been piled on the spot.

The black powder was allegedly taken from a car belonging to a friend of the boy's father.

Dispute delays Hamilton Woods

by Arlene Surprenant

The Wilmington Planning Board ran into a ticklish situation over a dispute concerning elevation calculations for Paul Butt's Hamilton Woods subdivision.

According to the subdivision's engineer Erich Nitzsche, the flood plain elevations on the FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) maps used by the town are inaccurate. While the maps show an elevation of 84, Nitzsche said his calculations show an elevation of 82. Nitzsche's plans for compensating storage of water in the development are based on the assumption the FEMA maps are incorrect. He came before the board to ask members to take a position on the floodplain so the project can move ahead.

The town's consulting engineer Mike Roach of Fay, Spofford, and Thorndike suggested planners go with the present FEMA maps unless they're changed by that agency. He said he contacted FEMA about the problem,had some feedback, and a 90 day comment period is already underway.

Roach said though there is obviously an error somewhere and "everyone is anxious to bring this to a conclusion," he advised that the developer meet with FEMA and his own office to work out a compromise. He explained with the potential for several problems in the future, including a negative effect on downstream conditions, the town shouldn't rush to approve the development.

The embattled subdivison off Rte. 62 has already faced other problems brought up by three boards and the developer has had to meet a long list of conditions.

Butt expressed his frustration with more delay saying, "as a lifelong resident of this town, the situation is just not realistic." He added he's tried to comply with the conditions imposed "wholeheartedly, sincerely, and honestly."

Chairman Carole Hamilton told Butt her board had to go along with their consultant's recommendation and could not, at this time, endorse the plan.

Kindergarten orientation programs planned

There will be special orientation programs for kindergarten students and their parents in the three elementary schools in the upcoming weeks.

On Friday, August 28, new principal Michael Tikonoff will meet with Wildwood parents from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Assistant Supt. Henry Dembowski will be the guest speaker.

Principal Dolores Silva has planned the Woburn Street School program for Wednesday, September 2 at 10 a.m. Shawsheen School Principal Robert Coffill will hold his school's program on Thursday, September 3 at 10 a.m.

At the orientations, parents and students will learn what a good kindergarten experience should be and what parents can expect during the year ahead. They will also receive a copy of the new kindergarten curriculum, they will take a tour of their building, and have a chance to socialize over refreshments.

Old dump site to be leased

The old Wilmington dump, in North Wilmington is to be compressed. The site of a former sand pit, close to the North Reading line, off Salem Street was used, in part, for a quarter century as a town dump. The use stopped, in the early 1950s, when an oil truck dumped refuse oil on the site, during the hours of darkness.

After the oil was removed the water department covered the site of the old dump with gravel.

The E.F. Shea Concrete Products company, on August 18th submitted a proposal to use the site for the storage of some of their concrete products, and offered a sum of $5,000 a year as rental. The sewer and water commissioners found the proposal to be agreeable, and, in fact, pressing.

Bids opened for Jacobs Street sewer

It is a case of "signals over" for the Jacobs Street sewer, in North Wilmington. Four bids were received last week, the lowest being $54,095 and the highest $109,203, for construction of a sewer planned to be 300 feet long.

The estimate was for a $17,000 cost, with the town paying one half and the abuttors paying one half.

"Legally, we can't do it," George Allan, chairman of the Wilmington Water and Sewer Commissioners said, on August 20. "In all fairness to everyone the costs should be reassessed.

The commissioners have submitted an article for the special town meeting of September 28.

Legislators oppose sludge plant

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington's three legislators told selectmen Monday night they were opposed to any MWRA plan to build a sludge treatment plant on Andover Street. The Andover Street site is one of 12 under consideration by the state.

Rep. James Miceli pledged his support to do "everything possible" to make sure the Wilmington site is not chosen. He said though it appears the final choice may be the Quincy shipyard, there is still a "threat" to the town.

Senator Bob Buell felt members of the MWRA set up "sort of a smokescreen" in listing other sites because they were planning to use the Quincy site all along.

Rep. Geoffrey Beckwith said one approach would be for towns to help the advisory board try to develop a comprehensive site selection process because constituents can very easily become the system's "victims."Beckwith also felt towns should have been given more notice on the water authority's plans.

The site on Andover Street is currently up for rezoning from R60 to R20 for single family homes. Voters will make that decision at the special town meeting on Sept. 28.

Miceli told selectmen once construction begins, "the site is gone." Buell agreed the town needed a viable alternative to head off the plant and show the state the community is taking steps to utilize the property.

Other topics under discussion Monday ranged from problems with the number of times Wilmington bridges have been hit by oversized railroad cars and the opening of the New Boston Street Bridge to the state's prison takeover and the legislative pay raise.

Beckwith said a resolve had been filed to get action on the bridge problem and investigations have been requested. He said while the Butters Row Bridge is now in the bid process there are currently no plans to repair the Eames Street Bridge.

When Miceli questioned why the bridges continue to be hit, Chairman Robert Cain blamed it on rerouting the trains but failing to lower the tracks under the smaller bridges.

Miceli and Cain were on opposite sides of the fence over the state's proposed takeover of state prisons. Miceli backed the state's plan because it was in a better position to pick up the cost of improving the "antiquated" jails.

Cain, who serves on the County Advisory Board, said "it terrifies me" that the state can take over the prisons now that conditions have been turned around. He contended this is an issue which will affect taxpayers as monies will come from the cherry sheets if the state is successful.

All three legislators opposed the opening of the New Boston Street Bridge, saying they favored other alternatives. Of the pay raise, they seemed to agree with Beckwith that the action seriously hurt their credibility.

Opposed to sludge plant

Wilmington's delegation to Beacon Hill, Rep. Jim Miceli, Sen. Bob Buell and Rep. Goeff Beckwith appeared before the Wilmington Board of Selectmen Monday night. They were unanimously opposed to the proposal for a sludge treatment plant on Andover Street.

Crop failure

Wilmington police conducted a raid on a home off Andover Street in North Wilmington on Tuesday, confiscating about ten marijuana plants. Arrested were Paul and Nancy Cronin, on a charge of cultivating a class D substance, marijuana. Released on personal recognizance, they will be arraigned on Thursday in Woburn District Court. Det. Sgt. George Shepard, above, led the raid, along with Mark Jepson, Jim Hanlon and Mike McKenna.

Redevelopment director outlines initial plans

by Arlene Surprenant

"We were standing at town center and I thought we would go someplace and look at it (town center)," said new WRA Executive Director Michael Matt last Thursday as he told amused redevelopment authority members of his first "outsider's" view of the Rt 62-38 intersection.

Matt, who formerly worked with the Boston and Watertown Redevelopment Authorities, outlined his initial plans to respond to concerns over traffic and undertake a feasibility study of the Rt 38 corridor from Woburn to Tewksbury.

Matt said his first step will be to get as many traffic determinations as possible immediately so they can bring alternate traffic proposals to the attention of DPW. He explained they have to decide if the present design is a good solution to Wilmington's traffic congestion and how to minimize "impacts" to the town.

Once the traffic study is complete and impacts known, it will be time to tackle what Matt viewed as his primary task. This was to come up with some plans for a pleasing new commercial district that residents "can get excited about."

"You're not going to excite people by just improving the town center intersection," he said. The difficult part, he added, is to explore what land uses can be supported to make town center "an attractive new place" and to gain citizen support.

WRA Chairman Jay Donovan said he expects Matt will make some recommendations at their next meeting September 10. He said the board would provide a full report to the board of selectmen, including impacts from the soon to be expanded Lake Street Bridge and the opening of the New Boston Street Bridge.

Matt will hold office hours on Monday, Thursday, and Friday mornings at the Chamber of Commerce office on Main Street.

The famliy of Arthur Eames Allgrove wishes to express sincere thanks to the emergency personnel of Wilmington Police and Fire Dept. for their quick response. And to friends and neighbors a special "THANK YOU" for the expression of caring and sympathy during our time of loss

Miceli proposes bill to suspend Ch. 774

by Arlene Surprenant

A bill to suspend the Chapter 774 law making that law "inoperative" as of September 15 has been put together by State Rep James Miceli to send a message to Governor Dukakis and, hopefully, "bring everyone to the bargaining table."

At Monday's selectmen meeting, Wilmington legislators met with the board to discuss several timely topics, one of which was the 774 law. Miceli told those present he is meeting with the House Speaker next week to try to bring the bill before the legislature on September 14.

"This is an absolute longshot at the very best," Miceli admitted, adding however that, "I don't see anything else."

Miceli explained with two 774 projects pending in Wilmington and a study commission on the law reporting back to the legislature in January, it was imperative to buy some time. This action, he said, would highlight, dramatically, the intense feelings of people opposed to destroying the environment and would show the Governor there are some problems with the law.

Rep. Geoffrey Beckwith and Senator Bob Buell were also outspoken against 774 and the way developers are changing the original intent of the law.

Beckwith contended that the law is not doing its job but is being used "as a sledgehammer that tends to decapitate a community." He said communities should have a "free rein" to approach the problem of affordable housing, adding he liked Rocco DePasquale's "exciting" proposal to develop low cost housing on scattered town owned sites in a short period of time.

Buell pointed out the original vote on 774 was very close in 1969 but any chance the law would be repealed today "is just about nil." He said one approach might be to stop financial agencies from backing developers once they become a limited dividend organization. Buell expressed concern with the high density of proposed projects and putting a town "in a position of becoming coerced" as is currently being done in the name of 774.

Other approaches under discussion were to give density more emphasis as a way to deny permits, to adjust the ten percent housing goal down, to redraft regulations which presently allow dense condominium complexes, and to afford communities a chance to comment on a project during the application process and not "after the fact" at a public hearing. Miceli said what makes the law even more "one-sided" is that some state officials now represent developers and "run interference" for them when they submit their proposals.

In letters to the town from EOCD officials Amy Anthony and Joseph Flatley, it was pointed out that the applicant for a comprehensive permit under 774 must respond to "each specific planning concern raised by the zoning board of appeals (ZBA)." These, said EOCD, may include such issues as housing need, traffic, parking, water supply, groundwater protection, and public safety. In answer to a question by Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, Anthony pointed out the state is not responsible for paying any municipal service costs associated with 774 housing even though the law, in many cases, impacts schools, sewerage, water, and town roads.

In his letter, Flatley said in cases where the Housing Appeals Committee has overturned the decision of local appeals boards, "most of these cases have involved either the failure of the ZBA to conduct the local process as required by Ch.774 or to provide adequate evidence and justification to support its denial of a comprehensive permit." Flatley goes on to say a developer has no right to threaten a community, saying if a town doesn't approve a proposal he will increase the number of units.

"Whenever such threats are documented, the developer will be denied legal standing to appeal a local decision to the Housing Appeals Committee," concluded Flatley.

Treatment center proposed on Tewks-Wilm town line

by Bill Conlon

A seven-acre parcel of land on Main Street near the Tewksbury-Wilmington line is being proposed as the future site of a $5.58 million alcoholism treatment center.

The "High Point" center would be located on the current site of Allen's Coal Company on Route 38 in Tewksbury, just a few hundred feet from the town line.

According to Edward T. Lees, Ph.D, president and chief executive officer of High Point, the facility will have a ten-bed detoxification section with a full-time medical staff and a 52-bed short term treatment facility.

The Tewksbury facility would be one of four High Point centers, Lees said, with facilities now in operation in New Kingstown, R.I., and Manomet, Mass., and a third center now under construction in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. Funding for the Tewksbury facility would be entirely private, he said.

"This is not a hospital," Lees said, noting that up to 55 employees would be needed once the center is opened, some of them medical.

Tewksbury Planning Director Charles Frederiksen said the center will be more like a resort than a medical facility. The center, he said, will be set back from Route 38 and will include tennis courts and a lodge-like building.

The project will shortly undergo a state "Determination of Need," which must be approved before the center would appear before any town agencies. A special use permit from the Tewksbury Board of Appeals would be needed first, then the project would have to undergo a site plan review by the planning board.

Public hearings will be advertised prior to the town gatherings.

Allenhurst Farm hearing stirs little discussion

by Arlene Surprenant

A planning board public hearing on the Allenhurst Farm subdivision off Woburn Street stirred up little discussion Tuesday night.

Developer James Banda and engineer Ken Miller described the 12 lot subdivision, which is made up of four hammerhead lots, four regular lots, and four frontage exception lots. Miller requested two waivers: one to extend the roadway which ends in a cul de sac and one to extend a stone wall rather than build a sidewalk along one side of the road. Proponents said approximately six acres of wetlands on the rear of the property would be turned over as a gift to the Conservation Commission.

Abutter Robert Bishop came prepared with a list of questions on impacts to his property. His biggest concerns centered on proper drainage in what is primarily a ledge area and the necessity of good landscaping and grading. Banda took note of his concerns.

In other business, board members heard an informal presentation on Dan Fonzi's 43-lot subdivision planned for Andover Street.

"We're back," said Fonzi, referring to a previous visit with the board to gain approval for a condominium on site last spring. Fonzi said he gave up plans to push for PRD when he couldn't get a firm commitment from Andover to allow a sewer tie in to that town's line.

Attorney Joe Courtney was present to outline the new proposal. He said 43 homes would be the maximum that could be developed. He explained there is a power easement on the property and the development would be accessed by two roads onto Andover Street.

Courtney, who lives near the proposed subdivision, said most of his neighbors support the proposal.

"The only thing I can say is this shows houses instead of a sludge burning incinerator," he added with a smile.

The subdivision is planned for one of the sites chosen by MWRA for a sludge treatment plant. Fonzi hopes he will be successful this time at the September 28 special town meeting in rezoning the parcel to R20.

Jodi Demos on television Sunday

Fifteen year old Jodi Demos of Hopkins Street will display her jazz dancing talent on Dave Maynard's Talent Showcase. The show airs this Sunday, August 30 at 10:30 a.m. on Channel Five.

Jodi, the daughter of Eleanor and James Demos, has studied jazz, ballet, and tap dancing since the age of three. She has studied with the Debby Hanley Dance Studio in Tewksbury and the Sherry Gold Studio III in Boston and won several awards for her ability.

Designer chosen for water tower

Weston & Sampson, Wakefield engineering firm, has been asked by the Wilmington Water & Sewer Department to design the construction of the proposed 3,000,000 gallon water tank, to be erected in North Wilmington. It is planned to be 100 feet in diameter, and 50 feet high.

The approach work, pipelines etc., is being designed by Fay, Spofford & Thorndike. The Sewer and Water Commissioners will have to submit an article to the own meeting, to have the construction approved.

Construction of the tank will bring to three the number in Wilmington. The Kelly Hill tank, constructed about 1929, holds 660,000 gallons, and that off Hillside Way, in south Wilmington holds 1.5 million gallons.

The commissioners plan to keep the Kelly Hill water tower in use, even if it is about 50 years old and presents problems not to be found with modern concrete tanks.

Special needs bus costs increase

Wilmington School Committee members learned last Wednesday that transportation costs for special needs children are spiraling as they elected to add a third mini bus to pick up runs to Andover and Lawrence. This, said Supt. Robert Horan, would save the system approximately $36,000.

According to Horan, the transportation bids came in much higher than expected, forcing Wilmington to explore other options. He said he went to the Merrimack Transportation Center to set up separate transportation but discovered that the cost would be over $100 per child per day.

"Transportation is strangling us," he said, adding that this is a problem many towns are facing this year. In addition to paying for buses for special education students, the school department also pays an approximate $12,000 to transport two students to Essex Agricultural Institute.

Horan suggested the committee go with the bid from Transcom, and they hire a third mini bus driver. This the committee voted unanimously though Bridget Zukas said they had had some problems with that company in previous years.

Before you accept that credit card offer, be sure you know all the costs involved!

Chances are, you've received one or more offers in the mail — or even over the telephone — urging you to accept a bank credit card. Usually, you will have already been "pre-approved" for a hefty line of credit.

Charges for bank credit cards vary widely and may remain hidden until a special circumstance arises. Most people tend to think that the only two charges associated with a bank credit card are the annual membership fee and the annual percentage rate. But some credit cards charge fees for cash advances, late payment fees, overlimit fees, fees to replace a lost card, and more.

At Arlington Trust Company, we do not hide any charges. Our current fees are $16 annual fee and 16% fixed annual percentage rate. There are no other charges or fees.

Return this coupon and receive our free pamphlet explaining the various hidden costs that may be associated with credit cards. It contains a handy check list to help you discover the true costs of any credit card you may be considering. Or call us at 681-7300.

Engineering decisions

People who live in areas where condominiums are proposed tend to become excited about it. Those who live elsewhere, even in the same town, often just yawn. It is a case of NIMBY - Not In My Back Yard.

That is the way it was, August 18 when the Wilmington Board of Appeals turned down a proposal for some Chapter 774 housing, off Ballardvale Street. There were hardly more than 100 persons present. The town as a whole, definitely, was not excited.

The chairman of the Board of Appeals laid the facts on the line. Such a decision can be appealed to the State Housing Appeals Committee. In 90 percent of such appeals the decision is against the local board.

In other words, the odds were only one in 10 that the local board will be sustained, in any given case. The figures are impressive. The local board generally loses, and the Chapter 774 proposal almost always wins.

In this particular instance there seems to be a difference. The hard nosed Wilmington Water and Sewer Commissioners made that difference.

The people on that board are appointed officials who know engineering and construction. The members are not dependent on public reaction or popular feeling. One other town official, who tried to impress that board with his thoughts was left standing, for about an hour recently, while the board went about its business. Finally that official left unheard.

There may be people in Wilmington, and possibly in other towns, who hope there will be a similar decision by water and sewer commissioners, for 774 proposals in their neighborhoods. Those people should not hold their breath too long.

Just because the water and sewer commissioners spoke up against a proposal a week ago, on engineering facts, is no reason to assume they will do so again in a future hearing.

To repeat, their decisions are based on engineering facts.

Protect your pooch

Would you hang your dog? Would you risk its health or its life?

Many dog owners are unwittingly doing just that when they have their dogs ride in the back of their pickup trucks.

Going for a ride is a treat for most dogs and some dogs become excited at the words, "Want to go for a ride?" But where they sit when they go for that ride is important. They do not belong in the back of a pickup.

Because dogs can't hold on the way humans do, they can become victims of sudden starts, stops or turns. If the dog is not leashed, it might be tossed onto the highway. And worse, if it is leashed, it might be strangled if he were to fall over the side.

Wind exposure is another problem. While dogs generally love the feeling of wind in their ears, it can be harmful. Their mucous membranes can be irritated, and pieces of grit may land in their eyes. Insects or flying debris may lodge in the nasal passage or get sucked into the windpipe.

Weather is also a problem for the dog riding in the back of a pickup. In hot weather, the bed of the truck may heat up, causing burns on the pads of his feet. A dog left sitting in the broiling sun without shade or water can suffer heat stroke.

If your dog must ride with you, let it ride safely in the cab, or else in a crate tied securely in the back of the truck. Better yet, leave the dog at home.

If you need one more reason for protecting your dog, Wilmington dog officer Ellen Davis points out that transporting an animal in a way that might endanger it is an arrestable offense in Massachusetts, with a $500 fine or a year imprisonment, or both.

Mailbox monster There's a monster sitting on Coral Street in Wilmington. It eats junk mail, magazines, and -- of course -- bills. So far, there are no reports of any missing mail carriers. The Nickerson mailbox, with a face on the front, is completely covered by morning glories.

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

On the evening of August the 18th, 1987, the Wilmington Board of Appeals denied IMG a comprehensive permit to build a large number of condominiums in North Wilmington. With that denial, the citizens of Wilmington witnessed a rather important event in that they witnessed the democratic process at work in its finest form.

In the few weeks, days, and even hours before the BOA was scheduled to meet to render its decision on Wilmington's very first condominium development, the members of the BOA were publicly and privately stating that they were most likely going to approve IGM's permit request.

In fact, the great majority of the citizens of Wilmington believed that their decision was a foregone conclusion and that there was little or nothing that could be done to change their minds.

However, when the decision was made to deny IMG's permit, it came of little or no surprise to many of those who, during those weeks and days before the meeting, worked hard to convince the BOA that their role in town government is to represent the direct wishes of the majority of the people of Wilmington who employ them and to disavow any personal feelings or interests they may have in the decision at hand.

Simply put, they were forced, by the responsibility of the office to which they were appointed, to make the only decision possible. During the few days prior to the meeting, the members of the BOA were contacted by a great number of people from not only North Wilmington but from all over the town and including the members of the Board of Selectmen. All of these people contacted them to say that they and their friends and neighbors were opposed to the form of development proposed for Wilmington by IMG and requested that they deny the permit.

It is because of that effort by the citizens of Wilmington that the BOA changed their minds and denied the permit. There is no other reason.

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

If there is anything Americans cannot stand, it's a sore loser. And, apparently, many members of the state legislature could accurately be labeled as such according to their votes on a new seat belt law. Furthermore, all of this ironically follows a state referendum which had just repealed the mandatory use of safety belts in automobiles last November.

The chief culprit here is none other than Rep. Barbara Grey, Republican of Framingham. Grey, who doesn't seem to be very much interested in the real meaty issues of the day, has taken up the curious cause of instituting new seat belt legislation. Just the sort of thing that will make this a better world, right Barbara? It was Grey, who not more than forty-eight hours after the seat belt repeal, introduced legislation calling for the use of seat belts by those 21 years of age and under. It was at that time that even her colleagues in the House were taken aback at her arrogance. But this past May, Grey was amazingly successful in amending a state law on the use of seat belts by children.

Grey's amendment, which became law on Sunday, August 9, requires all those 12 years of age and under to be buckled up. The penalty for not observing this law is a cool fifty dollars, which we must suppose is not going to be paid by any toddler, but by the parent. What's more, the enforcement of this new seat belt law is far different from its deceased predecessor, which applied to all age groups. Before the November repeal, you could be fined for not having you seat belt on, only when you had been stopped for another legitimate offense. That's called secondary enforcement, which made the seat belt law some what more palatable, though still unacceptable to civil libertarians. The new law has primary enforcement powers, which means a police officer could pull you over simply because he peeped inside your Oldsmobile and saw that little Johnny wasn't belted up.

We tried to reach Barbara Grey so as to figure out how a cop would distinguish between a 12 year old and a 13 year old. In fact, for a moment we thought Governor Dukakis, who obviously signed Grey's bill into law, might seek legislation requiring all children to tape their birth certificates to car windows. We wouldn't put this beyond the Duke.

So as you can see, this law is about as enforceable as the 55 mile per hour speed limit on Route 93. As a result, State Senator Bob Buell spoke in opposition against the new seat belt legislation. Buell said, "There is just too much intrusion into peoples' driving." Buell is opposed to the primary enforcement powers behind the new law, saying that "Police departments have far more to do than peek into automobiles."

Senator Buell drove this last point to home by recounting a story of a recent visit to Boston by an official delegation of Israeli V.I.P.'s. While meeting with Buell and Senate President Bulger, one of the foreign dignitaries told of how he had been mugged the night before in front of the Boston Public Library. The Israeli was not permanently injured, but lost a considerable amount of cash. In light of incidents such as that, Buell said, "Why isn't the emphasis on police protection, instead of worrying if someone has a seat belt on?"

In any event, when we questioned Rep. Barbara Grey on how police would discriminate between one age and another, Grey said, "Police judgement will be sufficient." And as to the real issue of why Grey has pushed this legislation just after the voters rejected a universal mandatory seat belt law, Grey, who muddled her way through the question, said "I don't think the repeal people won". Grey points to a poll prior to last November's election showing the seat belt law being upheld, and that last minute "mismanagement" by the pro seat belt coalition led to the defeat.

Now Barbara, pardon my ignorance, but it seems to me that the seat belt repeal people achieved quite an upset victory last November, especially when you consider the fact that they spent nearly peanuts in comparison to the hundreds of thousands of dollars spent by the pro seat belt coalition. What's more, the ads used by the seat belt fans had to be the most opportunistic advertising ever used, where the message was basically given that if you repealed the seat belt law, you were in part responsible for peoples' deaths. And the bottom line is simply that the vote has been taken. No one was snookered into repealing the law, as Grey insinuated in an interview with the Town Crier. It was a conscious decision made by mature citizens. Mass. voters said no to required use of seat belts, and legislators like Barbara Grey show their disrespect for the electorate when they sponsor legislation such as the new seat belt law, which is nothing but seat belt creep.

The Humble Farmer

Career Day and the real world

Most schools have a Career Day to which a dozen or so professionals from the community are invited to describe their jobs. The great lie perpetuated at Career Day is that students can become anything they want to if they work hard and put their mind to it.

Years ago we chugged through grade school mumbling, "I think I can, I think I can." More recently young idealistic innocents have been encouraged to fly like J.L. Seagull.

Sooner or later most of us are derailed or discover that we molt when the wax melts. Only then do the adults who have deceived us say, "That's how the cookie crumbles, kiddo." - "Ya gotta learn to roll with the punches." Or, even more to the point, a shrug of the shoulders and a "You can't beat manure and get whipped cream."

In this country good kids with varied interests and abilities continue to be pressed into the same mold. And when they don't come out exactly the same, headlines bleat that there must be something wrong with the teachers or the system of our society, and the head high-hooters proclaim a "crisis" in education - which they claim can be corrected if we will only vote a bond to build a new gymnasium or playing field.

Why shouldn't each young person be encouraged to enter a profession dictated by personal interests and permitted by natural abilities? The sooner young people are told the truth, the happier everyone is going to be.

Having all this in mind, I interviewed the first half dozen adults I met this morning. They speak for themselves.

"How did I get to be postmaster? Being at the right place at the right time."

"Realtors? A Rotarian who has been cashiered for talking too long at Rotary meetings would make an excellent realtor. Of course the very best realtors have gone bankrupt or are about to do time. Anyone who has been a consultant for a year without ever being consulted usually goes into real estate, too. When showing property you have to be able to throw open the door and say, as if you had just unearthed King Tut's treasure, 'And this--is the bathroom.'"

"What does anyone have to know to be an administrator at this college? Basic administrative skills, for a starter. Make sure you don't have a sense of humor. Brag that you don't read the silly local newspaper, and always refuse to be interviewed for publication. - That's a well known trick that should whet any reporter's appetite. If you're happy in your little cubicle and don't want to move up, let the people in the community you're supposed to be serving perceive you as cold, supercilious and aloof."

"If repossessing cars sounds too violent for you but you think you'd enjoy the same helpless feeling of going through life without ever accomplishing anything, become a social worker."

"Well, outside of your basic shovel and crowbar skills, I guess it doesn't take much to dig this hole. Long arms help, so the dirt won't roll back into the hole. I suppose that anybody with real brains today goes into crime or politics." With a chuckle, "But there, what's the difference?"

"Yes, the drugstore business is so good that we really don't care if we sell anything or not. If you think you could sit around and bounce your beaming grandchildren on your knee while a dozen steaming but ignored customers are lined up at the counter, become a druggist."

My psychologist friend, Addler, said, "One needs an inquiring mind for this. I think in terms of causality - why are some people crushed with guilt? Unlike TV preachers or politicians, even a prominent psychologist can't make the news by cheating on his wife. Oh, there was a doctor somewhere in California who recently got a bit of press for becoming emotionally involved with one of his patients. Kind of too bad--they say he was the best vet in the country."

The August 31, 1962 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

Capt. Eddie Woods of last year's championship football team was the only Wimington player to appear in the Lowell All-Star game against Lawrence.

The housing authority voted to award a contract for the painting of the exteriors of the 13 units of veterans housing on Wildwood Street to Bond Painting of Lynnfield. Bond got the contract for $3990, the lowest of four bids submitted.

With regard to rezoning to industrial more land along Route 93, an editorial declared "Wilmington has the finest indusrial land in the Commonwealth, already so zoned, waiting ony for someone with the imagination to get up and go. But we don't have the imagination. Our town hall is filled with ostriches."

Wilmington homeroom, grade 12 listed students from B. Coombs to J. Graham in room 112; room 115 included students from J. Robertson to A. Zaino.

A debate beween the water department and A.P. Rounds regarding water supply to the latest part of Hathaway Acres was over the installation of a two or a six inch main . Mr. Rounds, favoring the two inch main was consulting his attorneys and the water department declared "no water for the new development without a six inch main on Carson Avenue."

Pictured among the youngsters preparing for the upcoming football season at WHS were Lynn Billings and Dave Fuller.

Major Joseph Beaton, teacher and baseball/football coach at WHS was taking part in the current summer training program at Camp Drum, N.Y.

Staff Sgt. Neil Knowlton, attached to Hanscomb Field, Bedford was voted by the Wilmington Housing Authority to be the next tenant in the vetarans housing on Wildwood Street.

Legislators want investigation of railroad bridge accidents

Two legislators have called for an investigation into the alleged use of over-sized freight trains by the Boston and Maine Railroad, which is a subsidiary of Guilford Transportation Industries, Inc., of Billerica.

The lawmakers, State Representatives Geoffrey C. Beckwith, who serves Wilmington's precinct 3 and James R. Miceli, who resides in Wilmington, said that since December of 1986 freight trains operated by Guilford have damaged various overhead bridges on at least seven occasions. Two bridges in the Town of Wilmington have been severely damaged.

"In Wilmington," said Rep. Beckwith, "the Eames Street Bridge was finally re-opened in mid-July after it was badly damaged last February. The Butters Row Bridge has been closed since last February because of damage caused by the same freight train.

"To make a bad situation even worse, Boston and Maine has refused to show the proper insurance credentials to the MBTA and AMTRACK," said Beckwith. "Because of this irresponsible refusal, the B&M is not allowed to make repairs on the Butters Row Bridge."

Representative Miceli reported that the state Department of Public Works, which owns the Butters Row Bridge, decided to move ahead with necessary repairs and charge the B&M for the work.

"Bids for those repairs were opened by the D.P.W. Tuesday, August 18," said Rep. Miceli. "That very same evening, both the Eames Street and Butters Row Bridges were struck by an over-sized train. The Butters Row Bridge received $6,000 damage and the Eames Street Bridge was knocked out again.

"So far we have been very lucky that no one has been killed or seriously injured," said the Wilmington Democrat.

Rep. Beckwith concurred, adding that "the actions of Guilford Industries has shown a total disregard for public property and public safety."

"We have demanded investigations be launched from a number of agencies," Beckwith and Miceli said in a joint statement. "We need to know the exact causes of these collisions, and we must ensure that steps are taken to repair the bridges quickly. We want the investigating parties to research the possibility of once again using train crews that consist of an engineer, a fireman, and a trainman who can observe the train while it is moving."

In addition, Miceli and Beckwith called for heavy fines imposed against Guilford Industries, or any of its subsidiaries, if and when future violations occur.

The two lawmakers reported that letters calling for an investigation are in the process of being sent to the Attorney General, the Department of Public Utilities, and the House Post Audit Committee. Beckwith and Miceli have also jointly filed a resolve with the Clerk of the House that would order the MBTA to conduct a full investigation and take corrective action to prevent future incidents.

Wilmington school news

Billerica Boys Club

This year Wilmington will participate in an after school activities program sponsored by the Billerica Boys Club.

Boys and girls in kindergarten through fifth grade are eligible to participate in the program, which will begin in September and run from 3 to 6 p.m. Initially it will be set up in the Woburn Street School and students will be bused to that location.

According to Supt.Robert Horan, this is "an expansion of services (and) something that is needed in Wilmington." There will be no cost to the Wilmington School Dept.

High school renovation

Robert Peterson, official liaison between the Permanent Building Committee and the Wilmington School Committee, told fellow members last week new high school windows are set to be installed in January though there is the possibility of delay. He said the preference would be to install them in the warmer months to avoid disruption to classes in progress. If the present schedule is maintained, said Peterson, school officials may have to once again utilize the Swain School.

Elementary accreditation

Looking Ahead: As part of the continuing elementary accreditation process, a team of professionals is expected to visit Wilmington October 4 through 9. Team members will visit each of the three elementary schools, go over materials prepared by each of the sub-committees, and make comments and recommendations to improve the primary grades.

Assistant Superintendent Henry Dembowski said many people worked long hours preparing for this visit. As of this writing, a banquet is planned for Sunday, October 4, to welcome the team.

Teacher arbitration

A December 10 date has been set by the state arbitration board to review the grievances of eight teachers transferred involuntarily last spring. In the meantime, the teachers will begin the school year in their new positions.

It's YOUR Money

by Joyce Brisbois
Certified Public Accountant

HOME EQUITY LOANS -- YES AND NO

Home equity loans -- borrowing against your home to get money for almost any purpose -- are increasingly popular. Rates are usually lower than for any other kind of borrowing, you can tap into the price appreciation of real estate, and it's practically the only kind of loan that still may be tax-deductible.

But is it a good idea? Yes, if you need to borrow a large sum for a very worthwhile purpose. Yes, if you need to borrow and all other sources of funds cost a lot more. No, if you think it's an easy loan. You could lose your home.

Read the small print before you sign. The attractive ads list attractive opening rates, but they do not usually mention how high interest can rise, often without a cap. There may be hefty initiation rates to set up the revolving credit line and there may be a balloon payment due at the end of the loan large enough to require refinancing the whole package.

Before you make big-money decisions, discuss them with the knowhow people at:

Women seek building for youth center

by Arlene Surprenant

Ruth Marranzini and Eleanor Naimo made an unscheduled appearance before the Wilmington Board of Selectmen Monday night seeking members assistance in setting up a community youth center. Such a center, they said, would be staffed by professionals and would offer a wide range of activities as well as after school counseling for a broad spectrum of youth in the town.

Marranzini said she and supporters of the idea had hoped a vacant building could be donated as this is something that's long overdue. Naimo explained many Wilmington teachers support the idea and are interested in the concept. She added she hoped to coordinate the project with the recreation department.

While selectmen were receptive to the idea, they said there was no building available at this time. When Marranzini said they would intially settle for a small office with telephone space for fundraising and planning meetings "so we don't lose the momentum," selectmen suggested using the Fourth of July Headquarters.

Jim Stewart told the women a study is currently underway to look at the possibility of moving town hall to the Swain School. If that happens, he added, the present town hall could become the youth center for the children of the town.

Modernization of elderly housing

A Sept. 28 starting date has been set for the modernization project of the elderly housing units on Deming Way.

Critical to the start of the work is the arrival of trailer units to house the tenants during the work. Four apartments will be worked on at a time. The trailers are due in by Sept. 11.

Tenants, in the meantime, are starting to pack their belongings for storage during the work. The contractor is responsible for moving and or covering the furniture, but tenants must box their smaller possessions.

"Maybe I won't want to move back in. I may like trailer living," joked one tenant.

"It's something we can't avoid, so lets make the best of the situation," said Betty Keough, who has been appointed coordinator of tenants needs for the project.

Prayer To The Holy Spirit

Oh Holy Spirit, thou who are all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my idea, thou who giveth me this divine gift of forgiving and forgetting wrongs done unto me and who in every instant of my life art with me. I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all your blessings and reaffirm once again that I never want to part from thee though the illusion of material things abound.

My desire is to be with thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank you for your mercy on me and mine. (Person should pray 3 consecutive days without revealing petition. Within three days grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be.)

Fall programs

Now that the summer months with vacations, family picnics and gardening activities are coming to a close for another year, it is time to think of how we will fill our days as fall and winter are facing us. To help you enjoy yourself and replace those hours with other activities, come to the Senior Citizen Center.

Exercise program

We have many types of programs that will suit your interest.

Maybe you would like to shed a few of those pounds you may have put on living the easy and relaxed lifestyle of summer. Why not join our excellent exercise class? The instructor is well trained in the proper exercise for the older person.

We have a good class now, so you will not only shed those pounds but will meet some new friends. Exercise is so important to all of us, but especially for those of us suffering from cancer, heart problems, diabetes, arthritis, breathing problems, and high blood pressure.The class is held Monday and Wednesday at 10 a.m.

Swimming/walking

Swimming and walking are also programs under the council and very good for health. Swimming is held at the Shawsheen Valley High School Wednesday mornings starting at 10. Walking under the instruction of Ed Curtis is held Monday and Wednesday mornings starting at 9:00. Ed selects many interesting areas to walk, you will enjoy them.

Bowling

Bowling is another of our exercise programs and many of our seniors enjoy this type of exercise. It is held at the Candlepin Lanes in North Reading (rte 28) Wednesday afternoons.

Ceramic class

If you prefer to spend a few hours just relaxing while socializing with other seniors, why not join the ceramic class Tuesday mornings from 9:30 to 12:30? You will be utilizing your time making lovely gifts for Christmas. How about keeping the mind alert?

Bingo

Join the bingo game Friday afternoon. You may go home a winner. The game starts at one o'clock.

Whist

On the second and fourth Mondays of the month we have a whist game, starting at one o'clock. Prizes are donated by the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs.

Bridge

On Tuesday afternoons, if bridge is your game, join the seniors playing every week, starting at 1:30.

Arts and crafts

If you enjoy making things with your hands we have arts and crafts in the craft room every day. We have everything needed to please your talent and someone to instruct you if you are a novice.

Health clinics

We have health clinics at the Center. Nurse Abbie checks blood pressures, weights and temperatures every Thursday starting at 1:30 p.m. On the third Thursday she will administer a diabetes test.

At the Town Hall, on appointment only she will check cholesterol, triglyceride, potassium, glucose an diabetes. Each test will cost $3. At a hospital it would cost much more.

Hearing aid specialist

On the third Friday of the month our hearing aid specialist is at the Center

Podiatrist

Once a month our podiatrist is at the Center to check and treat ailments of the feet.

Sixty or over

Any resident of the town, 60 years old or over can meet new and old friends at our monthly therapeutic social. They are planned by the Council to bring together a large gathering of seniors in an entertaining social atmosphere. Therapy is important to strengthen our bodies after an illness or operation, but we also realize as we get older how important it is for older persons' mental and physical health.

To give and take support

So many losses come so quickly in our senior years. After working for 40-50 years we loose our capacity to keep the pace of the younger person and we have to accept retirement. With retirement we loose a weekly paycheck, friends we have known for many years, and how do we fill the many hours in a day. Many of us loose a spouse or a child, or have to accept being told we have a serious illness. To get the needed therapy to handle all the losses, we have our monthly therapeutic social. By attending you can not ony receive help but give help to others.

September social

The September therapeutic social will be held September 23 at the Tewksbury - Wilmington Elks Hall. A roast beef dinner will be served at 7 p.m. Music for dancing will be provided. Sign up for this social will start Thursday, August 27. A $3 non-refundable deposit will be required when signing up.

Lunch anyone?

If you would like to join the seniors eating lunch at the lunch site call the Center. The meals will begin again with the opening of school.

Applications and asssistance

Applicaltions for fuel assistance and weatherization are made out at the Center on appointment only. Assistance is available on elder problems at the Center and referrals are made when necessary for homemakers, visiting nurses, legal help in the following areas: Medicaid, pensions, housing, nursing home care,DRGs, personal freedoms being threatened by another, especially taking control of property.

Hours at Senior Center

The Center is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. to help you with your problems, or you may call 657-7595 - 658-2258.

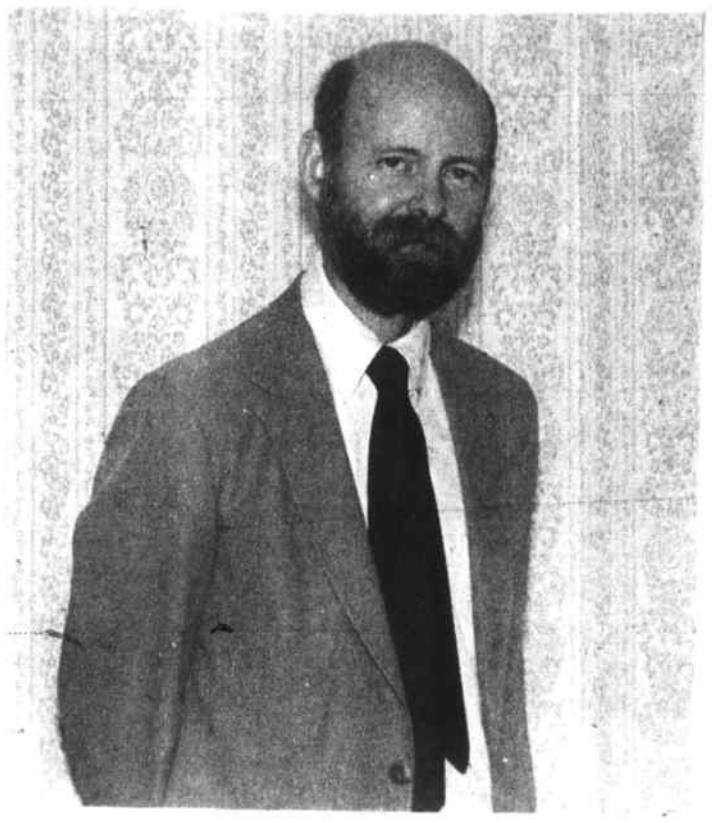
Some Wilmington men have become clergy

At least twelve men who grew up in Wilmington during the past 250 years have become respected members of the clergy. Some stories of these men are presented on this page. Other stories will appear later.



Rev. George Norton

George and Norman Norton

Funeral services in Wilmington last week for the late Arthur Allgrove, were conducted by the Rev. George Norton, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Montour Falls, New York.

Some who were at the service did not know the Rev. Mr. Norton. Others recognized him as being one of three brothers who lived at 383 Middlesex Ave., in North Wilmington Center about 25 years ago. Of those three brothers, two entered the clergy.

George had, in his youth, been employed by Mr. Allgrove, and had made a promise that, if possible, he would conduct the funeral service of his employer. That came to pass on August 18.

Norman Norton, brother of George, is a Baptist minister in Magnolia, Massachusetts. Their mother, Elizabeth Norton also lives in Magnolia.

Timothy Walker

The Rev. Timothy Walker, who became the minister of the church in Pennacook, now Concord, New Hampshire in 1732 seems to have been the first person, resident of Wilmington, to have become a clergyman.

Born in what was then a part of Woburn, he and his brother Samuel were the sons of Deacon Samuel and Judith Howland Walker. Their home, torn down recently and known as the Stanley Webber house, was erected in 1689. It stood across from Butters Row.

In 1705, the year Timothy was born, the town of Woburn was under orders from the Grand Jury to erect two more school houses, but was apparently without funds to do so. Deacon Walker and his neighbors erected one, of their own volition. It stood at what is now the corner of Butters Row and Main Street.

Timothy graduated from Harvard College in 1725, and shortly thereafter was teaching school in Woburn. Presumably a part of his duties were to teach in the school near his father's home. Timothy was ordained in 1730.

The first town meeting of Wilmington was held in that school house. It is to be believed there were religious services there as well, for the first two years, until the church was built. He was an ordained minister, but there seems to be no record of his conducting services for the town.

It is to be believed that he served the church in Concord for the rest of his life, after 1732.

Samuel Eames

The Rev. Samuel Eames, born in what is now the Wolff home on Woburn Street across from Wildwood Street, was the son of Capt. Daniel and Abigail Harnden Nourse Eames. His mother was survivor of the Harnden Massacre.

Born in 1734, he graduated from Harvard College in 1754. Shortly afterward he was ordained a minister. He served in the town of Newtown, New Hampshire.

Bernard F. Doucette, SJ

Father Bernard F. Doucette, S.J., was born in the home that became known later as the Madame Eames house, on Middlesex Avenue in North Wilmington. It is now the home of the Townsend family. Father Doucette was the son of Bernard F. Doucette, who was probably born in Nova Scotia, and the grandson of Jeremiah (Jerry) Doucette, he who built a nice home on Ballardvale Street in the 1870s, one that is still in the Doucette family.

His grandfather Jerry established a Sunday School in the Samuel Eames house in North Wilmington, later known as the Shamrock. The school was to care for children of Wilmington's Catholic families. They took the train in North Wilmington on Sunday mornings to attend Mass in Ballardvale.

Bernard F. (senior) was a stock broker, a man who later moved to Melrose. Bernard F. (junior), born in 1895, stayed in Wilmington for a year after his family moved, so as to graduate with the high school class of 1913.

He joined the Society of Jesus in 1917, in Poughskeepsie, N.Y. He became a Regent in 1924 and served in the Philippines, at two seminaries and the Manila Observatory. He returned to the United States in 1927, to Weston College. He was ordained in 1930.

In 1932 Fr. Doucette was studying meteorology (weather) at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. A year later he was appointed chief of the Meteorology Division of Manila Observatory.

He became a Japanese prisoner after Japan invaded the Philippines. He spent three years a prisoner, being liberated when the US Army freed Manila. He returned to the United States for a year, where, among other items, there was a quiet visit to Wilmington..

Returning to the Philippines in 1946, Fr. Doucette was a professor in two universities, and in 1951 was put in charge of seismic studies (earthquakes, etc.) at Baguio, for the Manila Observatory. Eleven years later he transferred to Manila, where he had similar work.

Fr. Doucette returned to the United States in 1967, having served 50 years as a Jesuit. His visit included a stay in Wilmington.

He returned to Manila a year later, where, shortly afterward he suffered a stroke. He died in 1974, after some years of ill health.

Gus McMahon

Augustine McMahon, generally called "Gus" was born in Wilmington in 1891, the son of Thomas and Isabella McEnroe McMahon.

Tom, about the time he was married, became a provision dealer. Many Wilmington men were doing that, selling freshly butchered meat door-to-door in Boston suburbs. Tom and his brother Peter installed large refrigerators and bought their meats from Armour.

There was a difference, and both men made out well. Tom bought a handsome Federal style building at the head of Wilmington Common, now 168 Middlesex Avenue. The first Catholic Mass in Wilmington was celebrated in that building at an alter which was on the second floor.

St. Thomas Church, Wilmington, which was a Mission of Andover, was established in 1889, almost 100 years ago. It was in this home that Gus grew up, with a church almost across the street.

He attended the Wilmington schools, and went to Boston College. He graduated with the first class to matriculate on the site of the present college, in 1913. He was ordained in 1918.

His first Mass was at St. Thomas Church, Wilmington, then still a Mission of Andover. His first parish was St. Angela's in Mattapan.

Father McMahon served as a priest for 19 years. On the Labor Day weekend in 1937 he was in an accident, in Winthrop Circle, in Medford. It was on a Saturday afternoon. The car he was driving struck a tree. A couple of men took him out of his car, and he was taken to a hospital, where he died the next day, from a punctured lung.

A defective muffler was said to have been the cause of the accident, in that there was carbon dioxide in the car. A contributing factor could have been the manner in which he was handled, when those two men removed him from the car.

Fr. Charles White

The Rev. Charles White, of the Paulist Fathers, grew up on Washington Avenue in Wilmington. He was an adopted son of James D. and Annie White, and attended Wilmington High School.

The pastor of St. Thomas Church was the Rev. Andrew White, no relation. Father White assisted Charles, and helped him to get accepted as a student at a seminary, about 1940.

After ordination in the Paulist Fathers, Father White has served in, mostly, New York state. He is at this time serving in New York City, at a Paulist sanctuary on 59th Street, West.

David Smith

The Rev. David Smith graduated from Wilmington High School in 1953. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smith. His father was the man who started the Smith Pump Company, on Woburn Street.

After graduating from Wilmington High School in 1953 he attended the Bangor Seminary, in Maine, and after being ordained a Congregational Minister he became the pastor of a church at Bar Mills, Maine. Later he was pastor of a church in Pepperell.

At the present time he is pastor of a church (not Congregational) in West Seneca, New York.

Developer would fill wetlands

It was only a casual discussion, but the basic idea behind the project is a radical one.

The Tewksbury Conservation Commission last week listened to an informal presentation by engineer Richard Cuoco about filling in the small pond next to the Mobil station on Main Street.

Cuoco said Ed Bowley owns the land from the Mobil station to the Shawsheen River, including the small cabins between the two. The basic idea, Cuoco said, is to fill in both the pond and some wetlands between the cabins and the river, then replicate the wetlands at the rear of the parcel, closer to Shawsheen Street.

Cuoco referred to the pond as a "pit," which he said is full of debris and trash. The filling operation would exceed 5,000 square feet, Cuoco said, and the area could be part of the Shawsheen River flood-plain.

"The whole site basically comes under (your) juristiction," Cuoco told the commissioners.

The commission was startled at first to learn that Bowley owns the land next to the service station.

"We've been sending Mobil letters for years," said commission Chairman Bob Rodgers, referring to earlier complaints made by the board about work that had been done within the 100 foot "buffer zone" around the wetlands area.

The idea of filling in the stagnant puddle was also met with surprise by the commission.

"We're going to have to do our homework on this one," Rodgers said, stating that the proximity to the river and the sheer size of the filling operation would probably cause all sorts of problems.

"I think the state's going to jump in hands and feet," Rodgers said.

MMWEC contract upheld in Hull case

An arbitrator, appointed by the court,has ruled that the Town of Hull may not withdraw from its share of obligation to Seabrook nuclear power plant construction costs merely by a town meeting vote.

The Daily Times Chronicle of Reading, reported the story on August 25.

Hull's municipally owned electric utility filed a complaint in the Plymouth Superior Court in 1986, claiming that some of its contracts with the Mass. Municipal Wholesale Electric Corp. (MMWEC) were invalid. A Hull town meeting had voted against further investment in the troubled Seabrook project, the complaint said.

Retired Superior Court Andrew Linscott was appointed to hear the case. Linscott ruled, in the first part of the proceedings with MMWEC's position that municipal light boards have exclusive authority to enter into contracts with MMWEC, and that such authority cannot be restricted by municipalities acting through town meeting.

He held that the contract was duly and properly authorized and properly executed, and that it could not be changed by vote of the Hull special town meeting in 1979.

Other portions of the Hull complaint will be decided by Linscott in the second and third phases of the arbitration proceedings.

The Town of Wilmington is in dispute with the Municipal Light Department of Reading, in circumstances that are somewhat similar. After a long dispute, in which the commissioners of the Reading Light Department refused to engage in any correspondence or conversation, the Town of Wilmington voted to establish its own light department, in the annual town meeting last spring.

Carnival and auction

Sunday, September 6, will be designated as this year's "MDA Day" in Lowell with a gala carnival and auction from 10 a.m.- 5 p.m., on Market Street across from Market Mills. All proceeds will benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) in conjunction with the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon according to Lowell area co-chairperson Connie Silvia.

Emcees and auctioneers for the event will be Jack Knox and Bruce Stone of KW Entertainment Productions. A great free outdoor show is planned featuring the nostalgic sounds of 60's Reunion.

The auction, will feature lots of great bargains, x-mass gifts: like a 10 speed bike, show tickets, dinner, get-a-way weekends, and a puppy.

When the carnival and auction wind down Sunday evening, a group of volunteers will man a bank of phones at the Lowell Hilton to take pledge calls for the Jerry Lewis Telethon from area donors. For more information call 777-0333.

Successful clinic

Bruins' star Charlie Simmer takes a break from his coaching duties to chat with Wilmington Youth Hockey vice-president Phyliss Vierra and Youth Hockey Club member Carolyn Kenney. Simmer was in charge of a very successful two week hockey clinic at the Ristuccia Exposition Center in Wilmington.

Mader invited

Chris Mader, a catcher for Tewksbury Memorial High School, has been selected to participate in the Brockton Invitational Baseball Tournament September 5, 6 and 7 to be held at Edgars Field in Brockton.

Over 400 college and high school players from the New England area are nominated by professional scouts and college coaches with only the select 80 players making the four team round-robin weekend classic.

Most of the players selected are college players or have already graduated from high school this past spring.

Only a handful are still in high school, with Mader being one of them. The top 25 players are then voted by the scouts to the New England area all-star team.

Outdoors column

by Bill Conion

If you knew all the things that swim in water, you'd never again drink from any untreated source. Ever.

Without getting into all the germs and bacteria found in open water, and a few of them are dangerous, there are more than enough insects alone in every brook and stream to make you think twice about filling your canteen there.

Just out of curiosity, I once did an experiment on a trout stream.

I've always known that trout eat bugs, but I wondered how much they had to eat on a day-to-day basis. Big hatches of water-bred bugs -- such as mayflies and stoneflies -- are always spectacular events and the trout usually gorge themselves. But on a day without a major hatch, just what do trout eat?

So, one day I took a strip of mosquito netting (actually an old curtain) and stretched it across a trout stream, held in place by two sticks. The bottom of the net was held down with rocks, to make sure none of the critters got away by going deep.

Next, I went a few steps upstream and began rolling over stones and logs, stirring up the water along the way. To better simulate a tumbling rock in a fast moving stream, I brushed the bottom of a few stones to clear off any bugs there.

What I found was truly amazing! The net was literally crawling with insect life. Oh, there were a few bits of wood and leaves, but the rest of the net was one, big wiggle.

Some of the bugs were large, such as dragonfly larvae measuring up to an inch and a half, but most were tiny. They may have been small, but they made up for it in sheer numbers. There was easily an adult-sized handful of living organisms in the net, and after only a few minutes of rock rolling.

And that's what trout eat all day. The larvae of dozens of species of insect are present in any stream, and they are commonly washed away during the normal flow of the stream. After a rainstorm, when rocks tumble and bugs are washed out, the number of larvae wiggling around the bottom is beyond mere counting.

So, one of the best methods for good year-round trout fishing is to use a fly-rod with nymphs.

Dry flies are more fun to fish with, because a surface strike is always more spectacular than a silent tug on a sunken line. But a nymph, which is little more than a hook with a wrapping of colored thread, more accurately matches the millions of larvae which are present year-round in any trout stream. Trout eat these tiny larvae day in and day out, and it makes for successful fishing to give trout what they want to eat.

But after conducting the netting experiment, and finding all those wee creatures, I'll never drink from a clear running stream again.

Ever.

The Greater Lowell Fly Fishers club is planning a bass-only fall fishing derby for Sunday, Sept. 13, from 7 a.m. until 2 p.m., on the Merrimack River from the Duck Island plant to the New Hampshire line. Entry fee is $10 and the HQ will be at the public ramp across from Heritage Ice Cream. Prizes will be $300, $200 and $100, with only one prize per angler.

There was talk of having the GLFF derby on the 20th, but the Lowell Regatta is planned for that weekend. It just ain't easy to fish in peace with a racing Thunderboat roaring by. Just as well.

Also on Sept. 13, the Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club is holding its Annual Outing from 1 to 6 p.m. The event will feature a chicken barbeque, pig roast, cake sale and flea market. To reserve a table, call 667-7789 or 851-9208.

Saturday, Sept. 12, will see a volunteer clean-up of the Shawsheen River, under the guidance of S.W.E.A.T. Volunteer groups may offer to help by calling 858-3733. The day will kick off with breakfast at 8 at the Tewksbury Rod & Gun clubhouse on Chandler Street. Bring chainsaws, rakes and boats if you've got 'em.

A superb place to net minnows for bait right now is on the Merrimack River, just above the Pawtucketville dam in Lowell. Life-long fishing buddy Don Dery brought me to the Lowell Motor Boat Club to see the huge shoals of minnows there, and a few sweeps of the net quickly filled the bait bucket.

Youth soccer camp

The fall is fast approaching and with it comes soccer. The Wilmington Youth Soccer Association sponsored a soccer camp this past July. It was very successful and enjoyed thoroughly by youngsters, parents and coaches. So much so that another camp will be run starting Monday, Aug. 31 running five days from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Many of the traveling teams are going to sign-up for the camp as a team. This is a different program, whereby the whole team works together for the week. Any youngsters interested in the camp can call Bill Wallace (659-6405) as soon as possible.

Travel team players should call coaches to see if their team is planning to sign-up.

A reminder that there will be an in-town coaches meeting Wed., Aug. 26, 7:30 p.m. at the K of C Hall.

Also, a meeting for all travel team coaches will be held Sept. 1 at Bedford High School.

Soccer starts Sat., Sept. 12 at the Shawsheen School fields. This season the WYSA is also kicking off the season with a field day Sunday, Sept. 13. This will be a cookout, and field events are set for youngsters, parents and coaches. Mark these important dates on your calendar

State of Massachusetts

Monopoly Champ

By JIM ROUILLARD

When you take on the Massachusetts MONOPOLY Champion you had better be prepared to take a nosedive.

Stoneham's Jim Daly, 18, is a glib, breezy, casual-seeming player. But his deceptively brash, off-the-cuff combination of play technique, seeming innocence and fast-talk have carried him now to his second consecutive state-wide title.

He maintains that winning a MONOPOLY game is 75 per cent luck.

And the other 25 per cent?

Well, regardless of whether those eyes and that smile are cynical or seraphic -- he IS the State champion, as the local competition, inlcuding even his own brother, has learned to its cost. And $18,000- plus for a few hours is not bad pay even if it is only play money.

Daly's latest victory will advance him next month to the vicinity of Pennsylvania Avenue -- for the eighth National MONOPOLY Tournament in Washington, D.C. -- and a possible shot in 1988 at London's Whitechapel, Westminister . . . and the world title.

Daly, a 1987 graduate of Stoneham High School, is something of a tough character to assess in one interview. A perceptive, humorous, intriguing mixture of the possibly modest and the truly intense, the young free-lance photographer seemed both genuinely and quietly pleased at the prospect of an interview.

But beyond the intensity there is a distinct and well-defined flair.

As arson investigation photographer for the Stoneham Fire Department, he once arrived via stretch limousine at the scenee of a Montvale Avenue blaze. There he donned a fire coat over his tuxedo, snapped the necessary frames, and proceeded, duty done, to the evening's scheduled prom -- and a surprised question from his date:

"Where'd you get that smokey smell?"

Daly is also not only willing, but exuberantly eager, to rise in the wee-ist of pre-dawn witching hours to respond to a fire call. Currently a member of the Malden Emergency Rescue Two Unit, his photos appear in the local and Boston press, and he continues to snap official pictures for the Stoneham Fire Department's arson investigation unit.

So Daly is clearly subject to what his mother Karen sees as an endemic, possibly genetic fascination with battling flames. Two present or former firefighting uncles and two cousins appear in the family tree, in Lowell and Boston. Needless to say, Jim Daly plans to become a firefighter.

But the subject is MONOPOLY. And though for board games he may like Risk and the head-to-head competition of chess. Jim Daly

Some things you just don't do!

You know, there are some things you just don't do. If you're a car salesman and you're trying to sell a car to an older couple, you don't tell the guy his wife looks like Elvira after she's been caught in a rain storm. Even if she does look like a drowned witch.

Social blunders like this are faux pas of the worst kind.

I recently bumped into an older woman who's been an acquaintance of mine for years, however I hadn't seen her in some time 'till that afternoon. I was leaning over the cabbage counter at Star Market. She spotted me from behind and said, "Hello, stranger."

Still squeezing a nice leafy head, I wheeled around. I recognized her immediately. She had a carton of milk and a package of fabric softener in her hands. "Ann, nice to see you," I said. "How've you been? "

Well, she proceeded to tell me. She said it was the Reader's Digest version, but I tended to doubt it. The cabbage began to wilt from the perspiration building up in the palm of my hand. Yeah, it was truly enjoyable seeing her again, but to be honest, I wanted to get home and cook supper. I had this gorgeous twenty-four year old lady waiting to taste my

ADVANCE TO PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE — Jim Daly of Stoneham, two-time Massachusetts State Monopoly Game Champion, has earned his way — all expenses paid — to national competition in Washington, D.C. at Eighth National Monopoly Tournament, thanks to combination of guile, fast-talk, and skill at wheeling and dealing in the world's most popular board game.

He's not alone.

The MONOPOLY game, according to Parker Brothers, its Beverly-based owners, has been played an estimated 250 million people since 1935 -- making it far and away the world's most popular board game.

"Trivial Pursuit isn't as challenging," Daly said. "In MONOPOLY you can express and use your personality better. You can play dumb like a fox, wheeling and dealing. It also helps to be a fast talker, and it's fun to use the sad eyes to persuade people to sell."

But it's easier to show than to tell.

"You want a quick game?" he suggested, and the bait was quickly taken: board set up, dice in hand, victim ready for good-natured slaughter. For the competition, there was one brief, shining moment during play when the Massachusetts State Champion received the most dreaded of all MONOPOLY instruction cards, which reads like a token of doom:

"You are assessed for street repairs: $40 PER HOUSE $115 PER HOTEL"

But Daly barely changed color or composure, paid the fine, and calmly sent on to ultimate victory.

More than 100 million MONOPOLY game sets have been sold in 23 languages and 80 countries, Parker Brothers reports. Among them: a set which went for $1,000, including sterling silver tokens and gold-plated houses and hotels.

A British version, "under license" from Parker Brothers, converts Park Place and Boardwalk to Park Lane and Mayfair, and substitutes Trafalgar Square, Fleet Street and the Strand for Daly's big red three of Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois Avenue. (It was basically through obtaining the latter properties that Daly so roundly defeated this writer).

As for the national title, MONOPOLY players from throughout the country have been competing in local tournaments since August of 1984 for a chance to play in the eighth U.S. Championship competition.

Daly received his Chance card in the mail this summer with instructions to collect his plane ticket and advance to the Mayflower Hotel on Connecticuit Avenue in Washington D.C., with all expenses paid by Parker Brothers. A family friend, Stoneham Police Sgt. Robert Swasey, will accompany Daly.

Daly said that three years ago, when he received notification that he was the state MONOPOLY champion for that year's competition, he thought it was a joke and tossed the letter in the waste basket. Then he got the confirming letter and invitation to Beverly Hills for the seventh national MONOPOLY tournament.

So he set out, at 15, to compete in Hollywood with 50 other champions (the total includes one from Washington D.C.) whose ages ranged up to 79 years.

State champions that year, he added, involved a male-female ratio of about five to one with a generous sprinkling of men in their mid-30s to early 40s. He said the the female contenders were more likely to be all teenagers. This year's state champions range in age from 14 to 54, with 50 per cent younger than 19.

The national competition is not an annual affair. The current title-holder William "Jim" Forbes, a certified public accountant from Winter Haven, Florida, won the 1984 tournament (in which Daly placed 10th), and will defend his title in the final tournament round next month with the four state winners who have advanced from preliminary rounds.

The U.S. title-holder will then play in the World Tournament next year in London, England.

Daly said he started playing MONOPOLY at age five or six, and like most early devotees, "we had absolutely no idea of the official rules -- we made up our own." When he won the state championship in '84, in fact, and even later in Hollywood, he still wasn't clear on all the official rules.

But he plays a mean game of MONOPOLY now -- and he's psyched for victory. His tenth-place ranking out of 51 in 1984 was no small feat, after all -- especially considering that he ended the first round in bankruptcy, having played immediately after a transcontinental flight and only five hours of intermittent sleep.

"I didn't know the ins and the outs then," he added. "I didn't really know how to play the game." But it's a much shorter hop to Washington and Daly's grasp of the game has advanced a lot further than Boardwalk.

The son of Jim and Karen Daly, who have lived in Stoneham for 16 years, the younger Daly is an avid sportsman, having played baseball, basketball, golf and soccer during his career at Stoneham High. A sister, Janet, 17, and brother Kevin, 16, round out the Daly family to a neat circle of five members.

Daly confesses that the hat is his favorite play token -- with the dog a close second -- and freely discusses his play strategy -- which we won't mention here, for the sake of the Commonwealth and the hope of sending someone from Massachusetts to represent the nation at the Court of St. James.

Just to be warned though, the next time you face those sad and innocent Daly eyes from across a MONOPOLY board, as they roll with the dice and help to urge a "deal" from a set of gleaming, seemingly innocent white teeth.

They may not be so sad and innocent after all.

"Ninot's Puppets"

The sea lions, tigers and llamas welcome "Ninot's Puppets' to the first children's performance held at the Stone Zoo in Stoneham on Saturday, August 29 at 2 p.m.

There is a small admission fee.

Stone Zoo opens its gates to an afternoon of stories collected from all over the world and told in a special way with music by a host of puppets ranging from twelve inches to an amazing twelve feet tall.

Make it a family day. Bring a picnic, stroll around the zoo and as a bonus hear tales like "Why Frogs Don't Play with Snakes" or "The Dragon and the Princess" starring a huge red dragon stalking some townspeople one by one. Kids love the 7-foot dragon who appears from behind a curtain.

"Ninot's Puppets" was founded in 1985 by Jane Urban and Mark Dannenhauer, puppeteers with over 19 years of experience. Ninot's has given hundreds of performances and you'll be the wiser for setting aside August 29 for Ninot's Puppets at the Stone Zoo, where your imagination runs wild!

ROVING

cuisine, and this old friend was keeping me from completing that evening's destiny.

"Well, Ann, it was really great seeing you," I finally had to interject, or she would have moved on to telling me all about her recent relationship with a croupier from Las Vegas. I think she got as far as informing me that his name was Jack but the relationship only lasted ten weeks, then she couldn't take him any longer. I had a funny feeling it may have been the other way around. "Listen, I hate to cut this short, but..."

"You know," she went on, without paying the least bit of attention to what I was trying to do to her. "There's something different about you."

"Jeez, Ann, I don't feel any different. Well, Ann, it was great see... "

"I haven't seen you in, what, three years? "

"Yeah, something like that. As I..."

"You look old. Yeah, that's what it is. You look old."

That was all I had to hear. I know I'm three years older, and I've got a heck of a lot of salt on top of ol' smokey, but old looking? I mean, old? I couldn't let that one slip past without a rebuttal.

"Old? I've got a few more gray hairs, but I don't think I'm old." All I could picture was that gorgeous twenty-four year-old lounging around my house, waiting for me to return with the goodies. She made me feel young. Even though there was no reason at the time to re-enforce that feeling.

"You look old. A lot older than I remember you the last time I saw you."

I needed this. Now I was getting ticked off, and all I wanted to do was get away from her. I decided to use a little reverse psychology. "Well, Ann, you look terrific." Actually, she had put on a lot of weight and her black dye job looked lousy.

"Now you're making me feel terrible."

You should. You're not doing much to preserve our acquaintance.

Just then, as if it had been written into the script, a former girl friend from high school, now married and whom I haven't seen in years also, strolled up to us. She was pushing a shopping cart brimful of groceries. She stopped when she saw me, and we exchanged amenities. Afterwards, I introduced her to Ann. Then my former girl friend saved the day. She proceeded to comment on how great I looked. Heck, I beamed at this, making sure Ann picked up on every humble blush. Blushing makes the gray in my hair stand out, but I always thought favorably.

"Jeez, thanks," I said in a modest tone. My old flame moved on after that, and once again I was faced with the dilemma of how to politely dump the old acquaintance who insisted on insulting me. I think she was finally getting the message that I wasn't too happy wth being referred to as "old." Look who was calling the kettle black. She's at least fifteen years older than I!

"I was only complimenting you," she said, trying desperately now to soothe my hurt feelings. I wore them on my sleeve. I'm good at that. When I set out to make somebody feel like a heel, I usually succeed. "You're aging gracefully."

God, me and Tony Randall. Give me a break, lady. I had to drop the head of cabbage back into the bin on that note and told her, "Ann, I really must be going. It was wonderful seeing you again, and I hope you and Jack get things back on the table again. Well, sort of, anyway."

We finally departed, and I finished up my shopping. I kept thinking the whole time, where is there a pit bull when you need one?

All I can say is, it's a good thing she wasn't trying to sell me a car. Talk about social faux pas! Well, the incident got me thinking. There are a lot of times when we do things to others that we shouldn't do. Oh, not because we shouldn't do them, exactly. But because if we do them, we may find ourselves on the losing end of an advantageous situation. There are times to strike and kill, and there are times to sit back and bite your tongue and be diplomatic. Even if it's killing you inside.

I've come up with a list of some of those situations in which it is to your advantage not to commit social faux pas. For example, you should never ball out your mechanic. No matter how badly he screwed up the repair job to your car, never give him hell for it. At least not until you've already paid the bill, you've got your car back, and you've made contact with a new mechanic. I've seen guys lose their cool before they did all the aforementioned things, and they had to sell their car and buy a new one shortly afterwards. That's how badly a spiteful mechanic can disrupt your life.

Another place in which you've got to keep your wits about you is at the check-out counter at a supermarket. I know it's miserable to be standing in a line while some seventeen year-old check-out girl takes her time with the four big orders in front of you and you've got to be some place in a hurry (all the lines are being manned by a similar seventeen year-old Valley Girl clones, so there's no point to moving to another register), but remember: give her a hard time and you may find your eggs at the bottom of the bag. Under your litre bottle of diet Seven-Up.

This next one is especially important if you like to drink: never, ever give a bartender a hard time. Remember, he's the guy who's making your drink. I've seen guys give a bartender a hard time, and sixteen drinks later these guys are walking out of the place stone-cold sober. Definitely no need to worry about a designated driver on nights like that. And what's worse than walking out of a place stone-cold sober after you've spent forty-three bucks is going home and finding yourself on the, er, throne for the rest of the evening. Some bartenders who face a constant pain in the neck have a remedy for such characters: they slip a couple of drops of Visine in the jerk's drink. I don't want to tell you what that can do to a guy's intestinal tract the next morning!

Needless to say, you should never give the IRS agent at your audit a hard time. I know a guy who did this, and he ended up getting the results of his audit sent to the state Department of Revenue (this was before the reciprocal agreement law was passed). He not only lost his speed boat, he also had to give up his sports car. So it's always nice to be polite to your auditor. Not too polite, though. I wouldn't go as far as sending his wife flowers. IRS agents frown on anything that smacks of bribery.

This next one might not seem important, but take it from me, it is. Never show disrespect to the home fans at another stadium. I have a buddy who went to Yankee Stadium recently. He's even from New York, no less, and he still ended up in the hospital with a major league concussion after he tried to play Mister Nice Guy and break up a fight. New Yorkers who go to Yankee Stadium are animals and don't even know what social faux pas means, but as long as you know what it means, you'll probably — I say probably — walk away from the stadium in one piece.

The final couple of social faux pas could cost you your life. Never give your neighbor a hard time, especially if he lives in an apartment next to you. He's liable to buy the Fat Boys' latest album and play it in full-cranked Dolby stereo until you finally get so angry that you go to his door carrying a crow bar, looking for a jam (no pun intended). And never give the guy next to you on the highway a hard time. He's liable to pull out a gun and shoot you.

These suggestions aren't intended to turn you into a wimpy person. They are designed to allow you to win in situations that are most often no-win situations. Unless, of course, it takes place at the cabbage counter in a supermarket, and the situation involves an old female acquaintance who irks you to no end. Then it's O.K. to lose your control and smash her in the face with the biggest head of cabbage you can get your hand on.

Unless, of course, there just happens to be a pit bull growling nearby.

Retired Men's Club

At the August 12 meeting of the Retired Men's Club of Wakefield, Pat Carisella, sealer of weights and measures for the Town of Wakefield, presented a detailed and interesting account of the life of the Red Baron of World War I. Mr. Carisella has researched for forty years the life and military career of this World War I German hero. His talk was illustrated with many slides of photographs of the man and his war maneuvers. The Red Baron was credited with shooting down 80 Allied planes and his life is still celebrated in Germany.

Before the program, the club welcomed the following visitors: George Brown and Fred A. Cammon of Florida, Clarence Clapp of Reading and Frank L. Gannon of Stoneham. New members included Harry Lundberg, Bill McBay, and Donald Pelletier. Door prizes were won by Homer Lovering of Wakefield and Lew Batchelder of Lynnfield.

A moment of silence marked the passing of Anthony Minichello and Clayton Koehler (1911-1987).

The Safety Committee conducted a fire drill. Some of the members thought for a moment that the Fire Department was taking their job too seriously when they opened the exit to be sprinkled by water. As it turned out, someone had set the lawn sprinker too close to the door.

The bowling club meets every Monday and Thursday afternoons at 1 p.m. at the Wakefield Bowladrome, and the Bridge Club meets from 1 to 4 p.m. on Tuesdays at the Reading Senior Center. The band will play at the North Reading Bandstand on August 19 from 6 to 8 p.m. The public is invited. On August 21, they will play for the 209 Club (closed to the public). The camera club will meet in September when there will be election of officers, and six members will show 20 of their favorite slides.

The travel club reported a successful ride on the Merrimack River on Tuesday, August 11. The Deerfield Fair is scheduled for October 2. The Booth Bay Harbor tour has a waiting list. Chairman Henry Murphy of Reading asked for a show of hands to indicate interest in dinner at the Stationhouse Restaurant in Reading to be followed by a train ride into Boston to attend a Bruins game, and also an indication of interest in attending the circus at Boston Garden.

The next meeting of the organization will be August 26. The club meets the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month at the First Parish Congregational Church in Wakefield at 9 a.m. All retired men in the vicinity are invited to attend.

Does stress cause hair loss?

THE STRESS OF FAST-PACED careers and hectic schedules is thought by many to be a cause of hair loss. While medical experts debate this point, research continues today into all types and causes of hair loss. Those concerned about hair loss should consult a physician who might be able to pinpoint the cause and suggest hair replacement options or recommend a course of therapy.

George and Jim are two very different men with something in common.

George, 32, is a policeman in a midwestern city. Long nights and life threatening circumstances are a way of life. Four months ago, he saw his partner wounded in the line of duty.

Jim, 26, trades bonds on Wall Street. He works grueling 18-hour days, making million-dollar decisions in a flash. He fears he'll burn out before he's 30.

Both of these men are losing their hair. And each believes that job stress is partly to blame for his condition.

"Patients come in with all kinds of reasons for why they believe they are losing their hair," says Maria Hordinsky, M.D., associate professor of dermatology at the University of Minnesota medical school. "From Chernobyl to bad water, men look for a cause for their balding and frequently they point to stress."

Yet, according to Dr. Hordinsky and other experts, a definitive link between hair loss and stress remains to be proved. Still, evidence suggests there is good reason for medical research to continue in this area.

Understanding Hair Growth and Hair Loss

Hair growth is not an even, continuous process, instead, every follicle has its own cycle of growing, resting and shedding. When hair is growing, which 85 to 90 percent of normal hair is doing at any one time, cells within the follicle root are dividing, and the hair shaft is growing longer.

The growth stage is followed by a resting phase. About 10 to 15 percent of normal hair is in this stage at any one time; in this stage, hairs stop growing because the cells in the root stop dividing.

After the hair rests for between two and six months, shedding begins. A new hair begins to grow from below, pushing out the old or "club" hair in the process.

"Eventually, these hairs become the ones seen on the pillow, in the shower drain trap and in hairbrushes," says Elise Olsen, M.D., assistant professor of medicine, Duke University. "This loss of 50 or 100 hairs a day is not something to be concerned about, because most people have about 100,000 hairs on their head."

Normally, hair grows at a rate of up to a half inch per month, replacing itself at the same rate it is lost. When the normal cycle is altered and hair falls out faster than it is shed, the cause may be one of any number of factors.

The odds are that, no matter what is going on in their lives, the cause of Jim's and George's hair loss is the same as it is for most other men with thinning pates — male pattern baldness.

"This is the most familiar kind of hair loss, where either a hairline starts receding or a bald patch appears at the crown of the head," says Dr. Olsen. Over time, the two balding areas may expand to the point where they meet. The result is the familiar horseshoe fringe of hair around the sides and back of the head.

Male pattern baldness is caused by a combination of three factors: heredity, hormones and age. To experience this kind of hair loss, a man must carry genes that predispose him to male pattern baldness. That's why baldness runs in families and is more common in some races than others. He must also have a certain level of hormones and must be at the stage in his life when hair loss is destined to occur.

The Stress Link

Although male pattern baldness seems unrelated to stress or any other external cause, other types of hair loss may be related to nervous habit. Pulling or twisting hair, for instance, can cause it to fall out or break off.

Another kind of hair loss, alopecia areata, is characterized by round patches of total hair loss that occur suddenly and without warning. According to Dr. Hordinsky, this kind of shedding has many causes, some still unknown — and stress is sometimes thought to be a factor. Alopecia areata is sometimes reversible, particularly if the patches are small and hair isn't being lost from other parts of the body besides the head.

Telogen effluvium, another type of hair loss, is sometimes linked to severe illness or a sudden shock to the system. It occurs when an unusually large number of hairs go into the resting stage all at once. Either immediately or as long as six months later, they all move into the shedding stage, and hair begins to fall out rapidly.

Fortunately, this condition is temporary. Normal hairs will grow in as soon as the shedding hairs are out, and in a few months, the problem will usually disappear.

Remaining Questions

Can hair loss by alopecia areata, telogen effluvium or other causes definitely be linked to stress? No one knows for sure, but it seems that, for some people and in some cases, there is a connection.

"Although ordinary stress is usually not enough to cause hair loss, extreme stress can be," believes Stanley Teitelbaum, Ph.D., a New York psychologist who specializes in the relationship between people's emotional condition and their physical appearance.

"We've all heard of soldiers in combat who lose great clumps of hair overnight, or people in concentration camps losing hair from sheer terror in a matter of less than a week."

Stress and hair loss

Cntd. from S-6

Similarly, telogen effluvium has also been linked to emotional trauma. Larry Millikan, M.D., chairman of the department of dermatology, Tulane University, recalls a small girl who lost all her hair after her father abused her. Much later, when she was a grown woman, he appeared at a family reunion, and she lost her hair again.

All of these are instances of shocking, traumatic stress. Long-term, chronic stress might also cause a similar loss of hair, but no one is sure yet.

At least one study shows that people with alopecia areata report many more instances of stress in their recent lives than their hirsute counterparts. "The question," according to Dr. Teitelbaum, "is whether they actually experience more stress or if, because of their concern about baldness or other factors they simply recall and focus in on their anxiety more than other people."

Dr. Hordinsky believes there may be a link. "Studies show that depressed diabetics need more insulin than stable diabetics," she said. "Obviously, one's emotional state does impact upon the body."

No studies have been done to find the exact relationship between people, stress and hair loss. Nevertheless, the experts agree — reducing stress certainly can't hurt in the quest for a full head of hair. "Although it may have no visible effect at all, it is always good to lower one's stress level," says psychologist Judith Waters, Ph.D., Fairleigh Dickinson University.

Seeking Help

Anyone concerned about hair loss should see his regular physician or a dermatologist. The doctor will ask questions about life style, work habits and grooming habits. If warranted, an examination of the scalp, hair shafts and roots will be performed.

Although most men do learn that their hair loss is ordinary male pattern baldness, it is wise to have a medical exam, particularly if any traumatic incident or illness has occurred. George, for instance, having witnessed his partner's injury, could be a candidate for telogen effluvium.

"Hair loss, though upsetting, can often be taken in stride by a healthy person," says Dr. Teitelbaum. "If the problem bothers someone, he should seek medical advice, and possibly consider talking to a counselor. Hair loss can become a symbol of lost youth, virility, hopes or attractiveness to a man. When the feeling of loss is that great, it may be time to seek help."

It's time to plant autumn flowering bulbs

Even though we traditionally think of fall and spring as bulb planting time, it is possible to plant some autumn-flowering bulbs as late as August. Two varieties recommended by the Netherlands Flower Bulb Information Center are meadow saffron and autumn-flowering crocus.

Meadow saffron, also known as Colchicum appears in the springtime as a lump of coarse-textured foliage. This foliage dries up quickly, and the meadow saffron are easily forgotten — that is, until late summer and early fall. It is then that we see the meadow saffron's bright, showy flowers come to life. Similar in shape to the crocus, meadow saffron's flowers are larger and grow a lot taller.

These bulbs should be planted in moist soil at a depth of about 4 inches. The clusters should be grouped with about 6 inches between each bulb. Though meadow saffron will grow in direct sunlight, a slightly shaded location is preferable. It is also possible to plant the meadow saffron indoors. The bulbs can be raised on the window sill without soil, and will bloom late in the fall.

Autumn-flowering crocus resemble their spring-flowering relatives in appearance and size. One particular species of interest is the Crocus sativus. This variety is a source of saffron which is used as a flavor and color agent in many common foods.

These crocus come in a wide assortment of colors, from white and yellow to blue and violet. As with most of the smaller bulbs, autumn crocus are expensive and ideally suited for naturalized mass plantings. They will thrive in either full sun or partial shade, and look especially festive along open woodland or in a rock garden.

Meet the new Richard Dreyfuss

HOLLYWOOD — No one plans these things when they go out looking for fame and fortune, but Richard Dreyfuss ended up playing a classic part in his own life. Classic in the sense that we've seen it before. Too much money and too much attention is often balanced by too many drugs. The difference between Dreyfuss and all the other sedated souls in movieland is that Dreyfuss skidded to a halt, literally, and turned his life around.

You'd have to look fast to catch Richard Dreyfuss in one of his first roles, a tenant in a Berkeley rooming house in "The Graduate." And you'd have to slurp some coffee to stay awake during one of his later parts in which he tinkled the ivories in "The Competition." But in between came "American Graffitti" and "Jaws" and an Oscar for "The Goodbye Girl." Then for a long time there was nothing. His curly hair is mostly grey now and he sports rimless glasses, but the sober, healthier-looking Dreyfuss has resurfaced in a trio of flicks from Touchstone, the adult off-shoot of the Disney Studios. Gone are the hyperactive, nervous mannerisms and glib, throw-away lines. Dreyfuss has added a warmth to his performances, especially noticeable in his latest venture, "Stakeout" that gives him a new-found depth, even, dare we say, a sexiness. that the younger Dreyfuss could never have produced. You buy it, even root for it, when Dreyfuss' character, an undercover cop, falls into a relationship with a beautiful woman who's looking for a nice guy who won't bore her to tears.

Drefuss said that while he doesn't have a deal with Touchstone, he is particularly drawn to the studio that initiated his comeback because of Jeffrey Katzenberg, chairman of Walt Disney Studios. "Jeffrey Katzenberg believes that it's good to work with people again, and that you collect a group of people around you, writers and directors and actors that work," said the actor. "And I'm the closest thing to a contract player you're going to get, because I've asked to go under contract. Not to Jeffrey, per se, but over the years I've had conversations with different studios about doing that, because I admired a lot of that system."

Dreyfuss said that the newfound success of "Down and Out in Beverly Hills" and "Tin Men" has brought a different feeling with it than the success he had in the old days. "It's not the same feeling and it lacks the adrenaline rush. That's the best part of it. It's real. It's not like an amphetamine jag. It's not obsessed. There's a line in "Zoo Story," 'Sometimes it's necessary to go a long distance out of your way in order to come back a short distance correctly.'

"I didn't know how to do all of this 10 years ago. I felt, as you saw, out of my skin. I didn't know what the hell was going on and I became a drug addict because I didn't know whether my feelings were here or there. They were all over the place. The only relationship I had in those days was with acting. I didn't have a wife, I didn't have children, I didn't have responsibilities. I was a free-floating, pin-wheeling personality, without reference points and linchpins that held me down. The only relationship I had was with my work and I was obsessed about it and obsessed on it.

"After going through the things that you know, all the events and problems and things, I found myself with other loves as important, if not more, than acting, or my career as a film star. And I thought it was going to go away. We all thought it was gone. And that was okay.

"When it started up again, first of all it was slow enough so that it didn't shake me up. It's different than when you get a full-page ad in the New York Times for 'Duddy Kravitz' — that took about 12 grams.

"There's no class in how to be a movie star. Some people don't need that class. I did. And its lack was evident in my life. Anyway, I married. I have children. I have other loves. I act on other impulses. I find that even though I am working more now than I ever have in my life, the idea of working is half as attractive. The idea of not working is twice as attractive."

Dreyfuss said that the decision to turn his life around was made for him when his car accident and arrest a few years ago was plastered on the front page of the New York Post. "I have a friend in New York who was walking down Amsterdam Avenue one morning and he was about half a block away from a little news kiosk and he saw this sign that said, "Dreyfuss Busted," and he puked. He vomited. Literally, he got sick.

"When I was arrested, when I had the accident, I started to talk to myself a little. And then it became clear that the gauntlet I was about to run was not simply the court system, but it was the publicness of it, which is something I've never been comfortable with anyway. What God was doing at that point was saying, 'Oh yeah, you want something to deal with Jack. Well, how about going through this publicly? ' So, ultimately, it was the easiest decision of my life to stop using."

The 39-year-old actor is now married and the father of two children, three-year-old Emily Robin and one-year-old Benjamin Darrow. A sharp, witty man, he mellows when his kids are mentioned and grins, a lot, while talking about them. He and his wife, Jeramie, recently testified in favor of a bill that would guarantee parental leave for parents with seriously ill children. His son, Ben, was born with Peter's Anomaly, a rare eye disorder and has already undergone 24 operations.

The actor has put together a television special about the bicentennial of the Constitution due out in October entitled, "Funny, You Don't Look 200." He has also begun writing screenplays and hopes to produce something for himself one day. The next movie he'll star in is an adaptation of "Nuts," a drama starring Barbara Streisand.

"I consider it important to be offered work," he said. "I am a difficult type. I remain a difficult type. Whatever image I give out on the screen, to you and to the general audience, is not a simple one — and I'm not giving myself compliments here. John Wayne is specifically singular, Robert Redford is singular. And it's an aspect, by the way, of most successful film careers, as stars. The bigger a star you are, the more singular the thing you give off. I am more complex. I am specific things. I am urban, I am 20th century, I am intellectual, I am neurotic, I am funny, I am vulnerable. But it's not singular.

"Now, what does that do? Well, it creates to a certain extent — it's what I always thought I'd be. In other words, I'm not going to be the person who walks down the street and people tear his clothes off. I don't have that kind of stardom

— I don't have the kind of $6 million stardom, or $12 million stardom that certain actors have. The need-to-see, as they say in the polls. At the moment, Tom Cruise has a big need-to-see. Everyone needs to see Tom Cruise. My need-to-see is less than Tom Cruise. But, it's just enough to keep me working.

And so, my parts are harder, because they say, 'Well, he's not like a cop and he's not like this. He's funny, he's vulnerable, he's hustling, he's Duddy, well no, he's older now. There's something strong about him now.' "

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Frank Mazzoni of Wilmington told me that his car sometimes embarrasses him. It has all those sophisticated electronic gadgets and also a tape system. It tells Frank that his seat belts are not fastened, the brake is on or a door is open. It also talks to other cars when the car stops at a traffic light. This morning it said, "By the Japanese who made you and the ship Maru that brought you, you're no better a car than I am 'Hunka Tin.'"

My new car came with an "Air-Tight" guarantee. If any of the air leaks out of the tires, it will be replaced, free. I asked the salesman when I picked it up "what does the 24/40 warrantee mean?" "It's good for 40 months or 24 feet, which ever comes first."

I was sitting at the bar at the Woburn Elks last week talking to Lee Ward and Bill McGarr, and a man came in and made a bee-line for me. He grabbed me and flung me against the wall shouting, "Judo from Japan." The next night I sat on the same stool and asked Lee why I was thrown off the stole the previous night? "It's that fellow's favorite stool and he doesn't want anybody sitting on it, and by the way here he comes." Sure enough he came at me like a raging bull, picked me up, gave me a couple of "chops," and yelled, "Karate from Korea," that sent me reeling to the floor. The third night I sat there waiting for him. When he came rushing towards me I got up and gave him one terrific whack that sent him sprawling knocking over three tables, a cigarette machine, and the juke box. I then gave a tremendous Tarzan yell and bellowed, "Monkey Wrench from Sears and Roebuck! "

This is about the time of the year when my father and uncles would go to Charlestown and buy a truck load of California grapes. That was the start of wine-making that took almost two weeks. The grapes had to be crushed, then a four or five day wait for the juice to start fermenting, and then put in a giant press and finally poured in 50 gallon barrels. My father loved every minute of the hard work and I hated every second. I still remember his words, "Get out, get out, your hatred will make the wine turn to vinegar." I never had to worry when a young lady said, "Lips that touch wine, will never touch mine." I hated wine then, and even more now.

Another season coming up fast is football. Woodchips does not believe in 11 Iron Men — I mean a coach who has 11 outstanding players and uses very few if any substitutues. The object of football, or any other game in high school is to win — but not at any cost. Grantland Rice, said it well, "It's not whether you win or lose that counts, but how you play the game." I know Mr. Rice didn't have a new contract coming up or a vocal alumni on his back. Folks, I sat on the bench for two years. In the third year I finally got the chance to go on the field — not as a player, but as the water boy.

Two men were sitting on a wall watching a horse and wagon slowly coming towards them. As it drew near, one of the men asked the farmer who was barely visible driving the horse on the country road, "What ya got?" "Horse Manure," said the farmer. "What ya gonna do with it?" "Put it on my strawberries." Turning to his pal sitting on the wall with him, he exclaimed, "Gee, we put cream on our strawberries, and we're suppose to be nuts! "

Gary Hagen, John Ridings, and Tommy Kelly were sent by FDA supervisor Willie Cobb to investigate and inspect the sardine canning factories in northern Maine. Gary asked one of the workers why the heads of the sardines don't bite each other in the can.

I went to the beach early one morning last week and asked a gentleman near the shore, "How's the water?" He looked at me, smiled and said, "Lukewarm." I ran into the surf and dove under an incoming wave. I got up and ran out of the water half frozen. "Hey," I shouted, starting to shake from the cold, icy water, "I thought you said that the water was lukewarm! " "Well," the old gent said, "It looks warm to me."

I have been asked over and over again where I get the material for Woodchips. Well, folks, first of all one must have over a hundred relatives both on the Italian side of the family (my father Giovanni), and the Irish side (Kathleen, my mother's side). And, most of them are as nutty as I am. My granduncle, Jeremiah Murphy, looked out of his rectory window one morning many years ago in South Boston and noticed a dead donkey on the lawn. It was one of those small circus donkey picked up by some wiseguys at the Boston Garden. Fr. Murphy's wit was as sharp as a whip. He called the police and Captain Flynn answered the phone. "I want to report a dead jackass on my rectory lawn," he shouted. The captain, trying to be smart or funny, said, "Isn't it the duty of the clergy to bury the dead?" Well, hell hath no fury like anyone trying to get the best of Fr. Murphy. In measured tone he responded, "Captain Flynn, you are right and I will bury the poor thing, but I just thought I'd call you up and notify the next of kin! "

Frank Cuiliano is a handsome young man who unfortunately has lost almost all of his hair. He has tried every elixer under the sun, and some under the moon. Salves, lotions, and sprays have been useless. "I am not in the least discouraged," Frank told me, "because I firmly believe in the 'hair after.'"

Russ Rebidue is the proud father of twins. I visited him in Lynnfield and said, "Russ, it must be a problem to tell them apart." "Not so far," he said, "one is a boy and the other a girl! "

Many people have sterotyped scientists to look like Einstein; bearded, white-haired, eccentric men, hovering over assorted beakers and test tubes, sometimes blowing up the laboratory and themselves through the roof. That is definitely not so today. Several beautiful young ladies have joined the ranks of analysts at the FDA Lab in Winchester. If a Hollywood movie scout ever visits Winchester, I am sure he would sign up each and every one of them. Some of them are, Patricia, Maria, Pam, Sue, Mary and Jessica.

Woodchips welcomes new readers, Jacqueline B. Carabbendam, of North Reading, Charles Goodhue and George Poole and his lovely wife Mary (MacDonald) Poole, and his mother Anne Poole, of Woburn, Richard Midwood, of Reading, Arthur Marino and Marie, of Stoneham, and Lee and Jerome Kaestner of Melrose.

Fr. Martin Ryan, professor emeritus of Boston College and now at St. Margaret's Church in Burlington, told me the secret of some of the world's great orators. He told me of Demosthenes, who had an impediment in his speech but overcame that by going to the seashore and filling his mouth with pebbles. He would speak to the roaring waves, expelling a pebble now and then. Fr. Ryan suggested that I substitute marbles for pebbles. Folks you know that Fr. Martin Ryan is Irish, therefore inherited a great sense of humor. He smiled and said, "Woodchipper, when you have lost all of your marbles you will indeed be an orator."

Christmas plants start them now

What could be more delightful at Christmas than the sweet fragrance of hyacinths? Impossible as it may seem, hyacinths are an excellent bulb for indoor forcing, and will add a touch of spring-time to even a cold winter day.

In order to have hyacinths for the December holiday season, you must take steps now. Late August is when garden centers begin to display their flowerbulbs for fall planting.

Therefore, it is wise for two reasons to get your bulbs as soon as possible — the selection will be better, and the time factor involved is crucial to successful forcing. Be sure to select hyacinth varieties that are suited for forcing. The Netherlands FlowerBulb Information Center recommends the following varieties: pink 'Anna Marie' and 'Pink Pearl', white 'L'Innocence' and 'Carnegie', and blue 'Bismarck', 'Delft Blue' and 'Ostara'.

Once you have selected your bulbs, you need to follow these simple steps:

1. Plant the bulbs in clay or plastic pots, using plain potting soil or compost mixture.

2. Plant the bulbs at a depth which allows the green tip of the bulb to remain exposed. Stop adding soil when it is about one inch from the top of the pot.

3. A thin layer of sand should be put over the soil to improve water penetration and to help the soil retain its moisture.

4. Bulbs should be planted close together, but do avoid letting the bulbs touch one another as it will cause them to rot.

5. The entire pot of bulbs should then be buried in a cool, well-drained location of the garden. Temperature should not exceed 13 degrees centigrade, with 9 degrees centigrade being most desirable. About three to four inches of soil should cover the tops of the pots. This is where the bulbs will develop their roots. They should be kept moist, but avoid overwatering. Leave the pots this way for 8-11 weeks. During the last of November, they should be dug up. Once the excess dirt has been removed, place the pots in a well-lit windowsill. Keep the pots here at room temperature. They should be kept moist. After about three to four weeks, the fragrant blooms of the hyacinth should begin to emerge.

7. Once the hyacinths come into flower, they should be removed from direct sunlight to prolong the life of the blooms.

August 29

Dog Day festival

Have you ever admired your dog's beautiful coat and wished you had something as lovely to wear? By joining the August Dog Day festivities on Saturday, Aug. 29, at the Museum of American Textile History, you can bring home a tribute to your beautiful pet — yarn spun from the dog's own hair.

"Dog hair can be spun just like sheep's wool," says museum staff member Debbyn Horowitz, who will be spinning yarn from 1 to 5 p.m. "You can get wonderful colors and very soft yarn from dog hair."

People attending the event are invited to bring a small plastic bag of clean, fresh dog hair, with fibers at least one inch long. Horowitz says that hair from long-haired breeds, such as samoyeds, afghan hounds and collies, works best. The hair should be gathered when the animal is brushed, rather than clipped. Owners should not bring their dogs to the museum, and hair that contains fleas will not be accepted.

"We'll try to spin whatever is brought in, although not all dog hair will work. "Dog hair often has to be blended with wool or silk make yarn." She says beautiful items can be made from dog yarn, including sweaters, boas, jackets, etc.

Admission for the event is $2 for adults and $1 for children and senior citizens. This fee also includes a tour of the museum's current exhibits at 1:30 and 3 p.m. "Factory Labor: Shaping Work in America" features 18th through 20th century textile machinery in operation. "A Museum Is..." provides a behind-the- scenes look at what makes a museum.

The Museum of American Textile History, 800 Massachusetts Ave., North Andover, is easily reached via Interstate 495, Exit 43 (Massachusetts Avenue). For more information, please call the museum at (617) 686-0191.

Adult dance programs for men and women

Jacqueline Casey, former owner/director of the Jacqueline School of Dance, and current director/teacher of "For Adults Only: A Dance Program for Men and Women," recently announced the formation of her newest venture, "DancEducation Unlimited."

"Although I closed my North Reading School in May, I have not retired from teaching dance," Mrs. Casey said. "Rather than focusing my energies on teaching children, I am directing my attention to the increasing interest in dance expressed by adults in this area.

As a response to this growing demand, Mrs. Casey has formed "DancEducation Unlimited." "For now, our only program offered is for adults only, our series of classes in ballet, tap and jazz. Eventually, we hope to offer classes in ballroom dancing, stretch and condition and aerobic conditioning. Also, we are receptive to suggestions from the public and will consider including other programs as requested.

"Also, through the years I have received many requests to provide musical entertainment for local organizations, companies and theatre groups, so I am forming a small dance company to perform at their functions. Have you ever had the desire to be 'on stage? ' Yes or no, it doesn't matter, our classes are for everyone. Please join us! "

NEARLY NEW CHILDREN'S STORE

A great idea just got better! The Children's Orchard, formerly located at 172 Main Street, North Reading, announces their move to bigger quarters!

The children's resale shop moved to 134 Park Street, North Reading, on August 22.

The new store will provide over 1,700 square feet of "Nearly New" bargains for infants and children, including clothing, equipment, toys and books.

Children's Orchard is part of a rapidly growing franchise. The new owners are Robert and Karen Lynch of Newburyport.

"We'll be offering excellent quality at low, low prices in a cheerful boutique atmosphere" state the Lynches. "People know quality labels and seek them out. They're looking for brand name merchandise, like Osh Kosh and Polly Flinders, and we intend to stock great stuff and plenty of it," says Bob. The shop will now carry a selection of new items — car seats, playpens, highchairs, strollers, as well as new toys and books.

HIGH STEPPING IN HIGH-TOPS

Although it's doubtful you will ever see Larry Bird take a jump shot in a tutu, spectators did have the opportunity to watch the Boston Ballet II dancers pirouet in Converse high-top sneakers at its opening night performance at Boston's Hatch Shell on the Esplanade on Thursday night, August 13.

During the evening's performance before an estimated crowd of 8,000, company members danced in "Little Night Dances" and "Champ Dances" wearing multi-colored Canvas All Stars, a popular high-top sneaker manufactured by Converse of North Reading.

Converse introduced the high-top canvas basketball shoe known as the "Chuck Taylor" model in 1917.

Converse Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Interco Incorporated of St. Louis, is the largest U.S. manufacturer of athletic footwear. Converse markets a wide variety of models for athletic and casual use as well as offering a complete line of activewear for men and women. With offices in Brussels, London, Paris, Osaka, San Juan, and Pusan, Converse markets products in over 93 countries worldwide.

LAPD AND LO-JACK

The Los Angeles Police Department has initiated negotiations with Lo- Jack Corporation to implement the Lo-Jack Vehicle Recovery System in Los Angeles and statewide, the company said recently.

The Los Angeles Police Department has expressed serious concerns about the number of auto thefts continuing to rise in the city, a company said. During the past year, over 60,000 cars were stolen in Los Angeles and more than 200,000 cars were stolen throughout California. The department said it is able to control most types of crime, but that auto theft continues to increase.

Introduced in July 1986, the Lo-Jack Stolen Vehicle Recovery System has been installed in state and local police cars throughout Massachusetts. Since then, 44 stolen vehicles have been recovered through the system, with 13 subsequent arrests.

Lo-Jack Corporation developed and markets a recovery system for automobiles which includes a transmitting unit for consumer or commercial vehicles, and a tracking unit used exclusively by law enforcement agencies.

Alcohol-free sports sections

Representative William B. Vernon (R-Mansfield) recently applauded Boston City Council's decision to conduct a hearing on the feasibility of acquiring alcohol-free sections in the city's two major sports arenas.

Vernon has sponsored state legislation for the past four years which would require local licensing authorities throughout the state to ban the consumption of alcohol in at least ten percent of the seating of professional sporting arenas.

"Although the bill has been sent to a study by the Committee on Government Regulations, I am hopeful that the legislature will reconsider its position later this year," Vernon said.

"Further public discussion and consideration of this proposal can only help the effort to address the problem of rowdy and irresponsible behavior at sports events," Vernon continued. "Setting aside a small number of seats for families and others who do not want their evenings out ruined by others is a minimal consumer protection act."

NAN WHITE, Converse public relations manager, ties the shoe lace on a Boston Ballet II dancer's Canvas All Star prior to the first of nine performances sponsored by the company this summer. The performers wear the popular high-top sneaker during two dances staged at the Hatch Shell on Boston's Esplanade.

SEVEN SEAS WHALE WATCH

Whale watchers out of Gloucester had the thrill of a lifetime recently, at least from the standpoint of an historical event. The passengers aboard the Privateer Fleet out of Seven Seas Whale Watch were treated to a rare sight, that of a Blue Whale.

According to Michael Linquata, one of the owners of the Privateers, "the Blue Whale is the largest animal ever to have lived on the face of this earth, (even larger than a dinosaur) and to see one in so close to land is really a thrill. We hope to be seeing the Blue Whale for the next few days."

Captain Nicholas Danikas, skipper and co-owner of the Privateer I, was the first to spot the Blue Whale and he immediately radioed to the other ships in the area to alert them of his find. "When we saw the animal 'blow', we thought we were going to see another humpback which normally feed in the area, but when we approached and realized that it was a Blue, it was really a great thrill. Blue Whales are normally found in deeper waters, this one was only nine miles from the Gloucester shoreline, and measured some 90 feet in length"

Whale watching continues strong on the North Shore. According to Linquata, the boats from Gloucester area have been seeing from four to 10 whales each trip. "Mainly they see Humpbacks, but recently, we have seen Right Whales and last year we saw some Sei Whales for the first time."

The Seven Seas Whale Watch is out of Gloucester and sets sail from the Gloucester House Restaurant twice daily in season.

VOLUNTEER FAIR

Representatives from 50 local non-profit agencies will participate in the second annual Volunteer Fair on Wednesday, September 16, at the Prudential Center Plaza from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The fair, sponsored by the Corporate Volunteer Council of Greater Boston, is intended to increase and promote public awareness of the many volunteer opportunities in the Greater Boston area.

Exhibitors include health care agencies, human services agencies, cultural institutions and civic groups. Visitors will learn about opportunities for aiding elderly or disabled people, assisting abused or homeless people, addressing environmental and housing issues, promoting adult literacy and job training, and supporting youth programs.

Special guests and local entertainers will encourage visitors to talk to the exhibitors and get involved in their communities.

The Corporate Volunteer Council of Greater Boston is a coalition of 20 organizations dedicated to promoting volunteerism amongst their employees.

For more information, call Cecile Gordon at 743-5440 or Pat Jacobs at 271-3038.

DANCERS AND TROUPES

The Odalisque Bazaar, on Sunday, August 30, will present, for the first time in New England, a day of continuous performances by New England's belly dancers and troupes.

The Bazaar will also feature a fantastic array of Middle Eastern clothing, costumes and accessories.

Hours are 12:30 to 6 p.m. at the Best Western TLC, Waltham (exit 27A off Rte. 128). Admission is $3.00 at the door.

For more information call (617) 926-1711 from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday-Friday.

SCHOLARSHIPS NOT AWARDED

Over $125 million of non-governmental college scholarships go unused each year because students don't know they exist, according to Student College Aid, a nationwide, computerized, scholarship locator service.

SCA has a computer database of over 250,000 awards. Students contact SCA for free information and a personalized dataform. Students complete the dataform and return it to SCA. The information on the dataform is coded into their computer. The computer locates and prints the sources to which the student is eligible to apply. This printout is mailed to the student, who then contacts the funding sources.

SCA guarantees to furnish at least five listings or refund payment with those listings discovered. The average number of listings the students receive is 12, valued at $12,000. The fee for the service is $45.00. SCA's Graduate School Award Locator Service is $49.00.

SCA publishes "How To Obtain Maximum College Financial Aid." The book contains the October 17, 1986 update and reveals strategies to enable the student to qualify for college governmental aid.

SCA's book "How And Where To Get Good Paying, Career Oriented College Jobs" is for students wanting work experience in their field while earning about $5,000 a year.

Books are $8.00 each including postage. Satisfaction on both books is guaranteed or your money is refunded. Book purchases are credited to the cost of the scholarship search service.

For books or free information write SCA, 3641 Deal St., Houston, Tx. 77025 or phone (713) 668-7899.

From scholarships to blue whales, COMING ATTRACTIONS has a little something for everyone. If you have knowledge of an event of interest to all, write, care of this local newspaper and tell us all about it. We are constantly in search of "something to do."

QP opens 51st season

The award winning Quannapowitt Players is proud to open its 51st season this September.

At the recent business meeting, new officers and board were selected, with Past President Nancy Curran of Wakefield continuing to serve as Award Advisor.

The new President, Honey Angell of Wakefield, will be assisted by an able staff: Vice President, Marsha Friedman of Wakefield; Secretary, Jim Murphy of Somerville; Treasurer, Jeanne Gorfine of Malden; Publicity Chairman, Irene Ehl of Reading; Ticket Agent, Marilyn Wales of Wakefield; House Manager, Keith Sherman of Andover; and Business Manager, Linda Ladd of Wakefield.

Quannapowitt has a great variety of shows lined up for the season beginning with Thornton Wilder's comedy, The Skin of Our Teeth, which originally starred Tallulah Bankhead! The Foreigner by Larry Shue is also a comedy with some really neat twists to it when a leading character pretends not to understand English! Neil Simon (an old friend we haven't done in a while) with Brighton Beach Memoirs gives us a unique look into his childhood. Talley's Folly by Langford Wilson (originally starred Judd Hirsh) is a charming love story.

The Quannapowitt Players invite new subscribers to join their membership and take advantage of the special full-season discount rates before the first show opens. Watch this newspaper for complete details!

For 103 year-old May Hurlbutt, cataract surgery was a "snap"

Cataract removal used to mean difficult surgery and a long hospital stay. No more. Now it can take less than 20 minutes. Then home you go. No overnight stay. New procedures make it quicker, safer, more effective. And painless. "A snap," according to May Hurlbutt, a great patient and inspiring woman.

If you think you, or someone you know, have cataracts or any other eye problems, call us now. The Horsley Clinic. Eye surgery is our specialty. Advanced cataract surgery equipment. Board-certified ophthalmologists. Bright, clear vision is one of the most precious things you can have, at any age.
